Lancaster Junior Judging Team Regains Trophy

BY PAT PURCELL

HARRISBURG — The Lancaster County 4-H Junior Livestock Judging Team has returned the trophy to the Keystone State after successfully competing against ten teams from Indiana, Virginia, Georgia, Ohio, Maryland, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania in the 28th Inter-collegiate and Junior Livestock Judging Contest held at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition on October 3.

The Keystone team is made up of four members: Emily Weaver, daughter of F. Ray and Carol Weaver of Ephrata; Tricia Musser, daughter of Harold and Judy Musser of Elizabethtown; Ellen Lewis, daughter of George and Lorraine Lewis of Mount Joy; Joe Garber, son of David and Edna Garber of Marietta. Coaching the team is Lancaster County Ag Extension Livestock agent, Chester Hughes.

The last time the trophy found a home in Pennsylvania was in 1983. The Keystone team took second in the beef judging competition and third place in the swine and sheep competition to amass 2,117 points to edge the Indiana delegation into second place. Indiana held the title last year and had the high overall individual scorer, Eric Heagy. Heagy racked up 729 points to squeeze by Lancaster County's Emily Weaver who gathered 722 points. Weaver took first place in the sheep judging contest.

Joe Garber took a first place in the beef judging competition to earn a fourth place in the individu-

A KILE Winner

Little Nathan Claycomb of Alum Bank, Bedford County, could hardly reach the top of his steer's neck, but that didn't keep him from showing the first place middleweight steer on to the reserve grand championship at the KILE Junior Steer Show. Renee Barker of Kendallville, Ind., had the grand champion. A list of placings for this junior show can be found on Page A-23. Other KILE photos and stories will be found throughout this issue and more will be featured next week.

State Vote Yes For Farmland Kickoff Held

BY
EVERETT NEWSWANGER

LEOLA — With the call of the auctioneer in the background selling produce by the farm wagon load, a group of dignitaries came to the Leola Produce Auction Thursday morning to kick off the statewide campaign for support of the Farmland Preservation Referendum.

With a bevy of TV cameramen and news reporters from across the state looking on, Dr. Maurice Goddard, chairman of the Pennsylvania Vote "Yes" For Farmland committee infactically declared that, "It's extremely important that we do everything within our power to preserve the base of Pennsylvania's $3 billion annual agricultural production income.

Eastern Milk Co-op Gives Report, Honors Farmers and Others

SYRACUSE, N.Y.— A drop in milk supplies and farm numbers in the Northeast contributed to a corresponding decline in sales and profits for Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative, Eastern President Earl Forwood and General Manager Michael Donovan told farmer-delegates at the co-op's annual meeting here Wednesday.

It doesn't affect the financial soundness of the co-op, they said. It reflects the fact that the reduction in milk supplies has increased the competition for available milk, they said.

As a result, Forwood added, the co-op is making less money, but the member-farmers, on the other hand, are getting more and more money in their milk checks.

He noted that cash premiums quickly developed in parts of the Northeast during the last half of the 1987 fiscal year, which resulted in $580,000 in extra income being paid out to Eastern farmers.

Feed Program— Drought Assistance, Here's The Scoop

BY KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

Pennsylvania dairymen and other livestock producers whose crops were damaged greatly by drought this year — and who are located in eligible counties — should investigate the benefits available to them under the Emergency Feed Program administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The program was a life saver for a number of farmers in the Mid-Atlantic area hit hard by drought last year. One of those, Tom Eyler, a dairyman near Keymar, Md., said of the program, "It was the thing that kept us from going over the edge."

Eyler said the government assistance, together with the free hay donated by other farmers, enabled

STATE COLLEGE — Even though it's a Nittany Lion, you'll find no pig skin at this fall classic to be held Saturday, November 7, at the agricultural arena. But you will find some mighty fine cow hide covering beautiful deep pedigreed cows and heifers that the Pennsylvania State University Dairy Science students have ACRES CORN UPDATE: Corn futures settled from unchanged in the deferred months to up 1 cent on the March option. Futures traded lower throughout the day, but staged a recovery late in the session on sustained strength in the soybean complex and fresh export business. Prices also found support from the expectations that South Korea's corn processing industry will tender for corn soon. Pressure came throughout the session with selling on ideas that the corn projection estimate yesterday from private forecaster Conrad Leslie was bearish along with declining Gulf basis levels.

ACRES SOYBEAN UPDATE: Soybeans futures settled higher this afternoon at or near session highs on spillover strength from the soymeal and bean oil pits. Renewed rumors of export bonus vegetable oil offers boosted oil prices eawrly in the session as meal posted small gains on spillover, but continued to remain sluggish on the near-term export picture. The fears of CCC bean resales helped to trim gains made in the November option, but talk emerged late in the session of that USSR may buy beans to make up for a deficit in their sunseed production. November closed up 4-3/4 cents at $5.42-1/2.

ACRES WHEAT UPDATE: Wheat futures closed slightly higher this afternoon on spillover strength from the soybean complex. Prices were on the defensive throughout the session on news that the USSR was dissatisfied

And each Funk's variety is backed by Hoffman research We annually run more than 50 test plots to ensure that only the best yielding varieties reach your fields

When you're looking for outstanding yields this planting season, call your local Hoffman seed representative Or call Hoffman Seeds direct We'll deliver a corn crop that stands through the fall

OPINION

Autumn Leaves

The glorious days of autumn are upon us, so let's look at the fascinating process that produces the fall foliage display. When leaves change color and start to drop, it's a sign that the plant's physiology is changing in preparation for winter. An increase in sugar production, which is eventually changed to starches and stored in the roots and stems for next year's growth is one reason for the foliage colors. All nutrients in the leaf that can be mobilized have been translocated out. Green chlorophyll is breaking up. The sugar reacts with other chemicals in the leaves to produce those vivid fall colors: red (anthocyanin), yellow (xanthophyll), and oragne (cartoenes).

While all this chemistry is going on, a layer of cells is forming at the base of each leaf, called the abscission layer. This will eventually cut off the flow of nutrients from the leaf into the stems and the flow of water into the leaf. At the same time, it severs the tissues that hold the leaf to the twig. Some trees especially pin oaks, do not form a complete abscission layer until very late fall or winter - sometimes not until new growth starts the following spring.

All this activity is triggered by shorter day length and cool nighttime temperatures. Frost is not necessary. A dry summer and fall can intensify the fall leaf pigments, but even with all the rain we have had, the fall foliage is still spectacular.

For many of our readers this fall spectacular happens right on their farms and in their communities. For others of us, we need to take a drive to our neighboring counties for a relaxing scenic view.

But wherever we live in Lancaster Farming Territory, now is the time to enjoy the pretty leaves.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Apply Lime

First, soil test, then apply the needed lime before the soil freezes. That 1-2 order of events should have a high priority now as we finish one growing season and plan ahead for the next.

In order to do its job of correcting soil acidity, lime must come in contact with the soil particles, not just those on the soil surface. Weather changes during the next 6 months will provide just the right conditions to do lots of mixing of lime and soil within the topsoil layer. Freezing and thawing, rain, snow and ice, help to move the lime downward.

During the fall season fields are firm and usually dry enough to allow lime spreading trucks to move about more easily. Deliveries of lime can be made on time.

To Beware of Grazing Hazards

Dairy farmers who are grazing their milking herds in woodlots, or in pastures with oak trees, should be on the alert for fallen acorns. Our Veterinary Science people tell us that acorns are somewhat toxic to cattle and will dry up most cows for the rest of their lactation. We are aware of many oak trees in pastures, and in most years there will be a pretty good acorn crop.

If the cows start eating these acorns, then the milk flow will be reduced drastically. Either cows should be removed from the area, or someone should pick up the acorns before the cows are turned out daily.

To Practice Good Public Relations

Farmers should be concerned about their image in the community. In most cases it's very good, and also the majority of non-farm people in the rural areas respect the needs and problems of the farmer. The image can be improved by getting better acquainted with your non-farm neighbors.

We urge farmers to invite their nearby neighbors to see their farm operation. In many cases a better understanding of the various farm operations will eliminate disputes and hassles about noise and odors.

Also, I would encourage farmers to become involved with community activities. You'll find that people that understand each other seldom have serious problems.

To Enjoy The Fall Season

The fruits and seeds of a growing season are meaningfully expressed and seen during the fall of the year. 1987 was both productive and unproductive in field, garden and orchard crops.

Now that the harvest season reaches a peak of activity there is a certain urgency to get outdoor work finished as we approach the first good killing frost. However, take time to fully appreciate the world of Nature all around you. For example, no season can equal the colors of fall. You see it everywhere in the foliage of shrubs, trees and vines. Farm, garden and orchard harvests are to be admired for they, too, are colorful in their own way.

Fall brings with it a time and place for reflection, evaluation, satisfaction and thankfulness. Let's relax and enjoy it.

Genesis 15:1 through 18:15.
Devotional Reading:
Genesis 18:1-15.

Abraham laughed when God reiterated his promise of a son with Sarah. And I don't blame him. God had been making that same promise for approximately 25 years and it had still not come to pass. Furthermore, Abraham was 100 years old and his wife was 90. It is the kind of situation that calls for either tears or laughter and Abraham chose to laugh.

It appears a most irreverent response on Abraham's part. But, it doesn't seem that God blamed Abraham either. Instead of rebuking Abraham for his unseemly behavior, he simply explains the promise he has given Abraham several times in the past: "No, but Sarah your wife shall bear you a son and you shall call his name Isaac" (He laughs").

HE BELIEVED THE LORD

It was not that Abraham had no faith in God. He had already demonstrated that with his response to God's call to move from Haran to Canaan. Furthermore, when God first made these promises of a son with Sarah, Abraham accepted them in faith, although they sounded somewhat improbable even then. Telling Abraham that his descendents would outnumber the stars in the sky, God is pleased that "he believed the Lord, and he reckoned it to him as righteousness" (15:6).

Even when God came again to him many years later, repeating that same promise, Abraham wanted to believe the promise, but all the evidence at hand seemed to make disbelief a much more sensible alternative. And isn't that often our dilemma too? We want to believe and indeed we have faith. Still, we can't help having our doubts, too. There are times when there doesn't seem much possibility, if any, that what we think God has promised is going to come our way. The doctor tells us the condition of a loved one is "hopeless," and we want to believe that the final word has not yet been spoken, but it's hard to take our faith as seriously as our physician's verdict.

GOD GIVES A SON

We need to understand that this story of Abraham is not just a tale of a man who faithfully waited for something good to happen to him. Much more was at stake than just the question of whether Sarah could give Abraham a son in their old age. Basically, it was God's own will and plan that would be fulfilled if he kept his promise to Abraham. Thus Abraham waited faithfully and patiently because he knew that God's covenant was behind his personal promises to him. When what we want and what God wants coincide or overlap, we have even more reason to wait for God's promises.

But, if, while we're waiting, we laugh a bit, it's all right. True faith is never without some doubts.

with the quality of U.S. wheat and on a lack of fresh export news. Japan's rejection of U.S. wheat offers pressured prices along with the failure of China and Iraq to announce purchase intentions.

ACRES CATTLE UPDATE: Live cattle and feeder cattle futures closed lower this afternoon but off daily lows as prices were lifted near the close on a short-covering rally. Uncertainty on the floor about the market's fundamental health, rumors of light boxed beef movement and concern over retail beef demand added up to plunge prices early in the day. Ideas began to filter that the market was approaching oversold conditions and a technical correction commenced near the close.

ACRES HOG UPDATE: Live hog futures closed mixed today with the front months pressured by weakening cash fundamentals and the unwinding of forward spreads. Ideas of increased interior movement along with lighter packer demand combined to drop prices lower on the opening. Mixed midday pork values also created some uncertainty while the deferreds were bolstered by buying linked to the liquidation of long cattle/short hog spreads.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

passage of legislation which would allow farmers to join together to form agricultural security areas, (Act 43 of 1981). While the act allowed farmers to make a commitment to preserve their farmland, the legislation did not provide funding to purchase the development rights to their land.

PFA along with other farm groups and interested organizations began a major effort to seek funding legislation. By 1984, the seriousness of disappearing farmland caused the Pennsylvania General Assembly to hold hearings. Representatives of states which have a purchase of development rights (PDR) program explained how their programs worked. But again, Pennsylvania was unable to resolve the funding issue.

Since that time, various ways to fund a PDR program in Pennsylvania have been suggested, but none seem to accomplish what was deemed necessary. Now, with a referendum on the November Ballot, voters in Pennsylvania will have the opportunity to give their support to a one-time, $100 million bond issue.

Governor Raymond Shafer appointed a committee in 1969 for the preservation of farmland to review and come up with recommendations for saving farmland. Every Governor and General Assembly since completion of that study have embraced the principles contained in that report for preserving farmland. Significant legislative acts designed to control the conversion of farmland have been passed.

Governor Robert P. Casey's signature on a bill to place the farmland preservation issue before the voting public is an affirmation of his commitment to keep agriculture a viable industry in Pennsylvania.

The Adams County Farmers' Association appreciates your efforts to inform the general public about this important issue, and hopes that you will continue along with us to urge voters to approve the up-coming farmland preservation referendum.

John Hess, President
Adams Co. Farmers' Assn.

Editor:

Dairymen, don't be fooled by the misinformation being circulated about RCMA not working, being illegal or that you will not have a market for your milk unless you withdraw from RCMA.

Overorder pricing is in effect due to RCMA and Mid-Atlantic Cooperative Marketing Agency.

In New England (Order Number I) the RCMA signup is very good. They are getting the full benefit of the overorder Class I price of $14.45 set by RCMA. This amounts to 73 cents on all Class I milk, which will return about 35 cents to dairymen. In Order Number II where RCMA support is not that strong, the premium will be 33 cents on Class I milk and the return to dairymen will be approximately 10 or 12 cents. The overorder money collected is on Class I milk only. The return to dairymen is based on all milk produced by the dairymen. Thus, the difference between the 73 and 35 cents and the 33 and 10 or 12 cents. Order 2 dairymen can help themselves by joining ranks and supporting RCMA to the same extent they are in New England.

RCMA is not just Edward Anna, executive director; Bill Zuber, president; Donald Duncan, Carl Brown and Cliff Hawbaker, directors, it is each and every dairyman in all 11 states of the northeast. If you want RCMA to work to its fullest potential, the dairymen of Pennsylvania have to get the signup that will make that possible.

Without an effective organization in the northeast to make overorder pricing possible, dairymen are going to feel the full effect of the cut in the support price, which appears to be more obvious every month as reports show the national production getting higher. With the 25 cent cut October 1st, and the anticipated 50 cent cut in January of '88, the price for Order II milk could be down 75 cents in mid summer and approximately $1.00 by a year from now. Ask yourself if you can produce milk without an overorder price and compete with dairymen in the midwest where their overorder price was 99 cents in September.

Time is running out, as well as the money that cooperatives are willing to spend to get RCMA organizaed. It has been successful in getting premiums from handlers, the likes of which we have never seen before. If you want to keep RCMA as a permanent organization to negotiate your milk price in the future, you better join today regardless of what your handler promises, or your premiums could disappear like the melting snow in spring.

Never in the history of marketing here in the northeast have farmers had the opportunity of setting a price for their product as they have today. If you want this to work to the fullest, join ranks with your fellow dairymen in RCMA or MACMA.

Pennsylvania RCMA Coordinator

Make Hardy Brand® your hybrid.

Make every kernel count.

On the Lawrence County, Pa., dairy farm of Tom McConahy Sr. and Jr., Hardy Brand hybrids have been part of the summer landscape for the past 20 years. And the father-son team likes the view.

"It's always nice and green and it stands heavy," Tom Jr. said. "Some people have said, 'My gosh, I never saw corn like that.'"

The McConahys plant their 300 acres of corn exclusively with Hardy Brand, using 301XS and 370XS for ear corn and the new 760XS for silage. They figure their shelled corn yield equivalent at 125 to 140 bushels per acre.

In addition to performing well in the field, Hardy Brand continues to do the job after the harvest, according to Tom Jr. "Hardy corn dries down good," he said. "And one crib of corn was so clean for husking . . . that shows the quality of the crop."

The bottom line for the McConahys is the performance of the 160 cows and 100 head of young stock in the barns.

"If we don't get a good yield from our corn, then they don't eat," Tom Sr. said. "So far, they've been eating well."

Hardy Brand Hybrid Corns are varieties for these times, when reduced acreage and slimmer profit margins are your big concerns. We've built a strong reputation on our outstanding yields, superior standability and high disease tolerance. Get the best return on your investment. Go with Hardy Brand!

State Vote Yes

part of the Department of Environmental Resources, in the mid 50s, I became acutely aware of Pennsylvania's diminishing farm and woodland. We were in a post-war economy. Things were booming and we were growing. They were exciting years for Pennsylvania. But, sadly, not enough thought nor planning went into those years of growth.

But, the farmers knew...and they were concerned. So concerned that throughout the 1960s and 70s, they pressed the General Assembly to recognize the need for conservatory techniques to save our valuable farmland. The General Assembly responded in passage of legislation to slow the erosion or the total loss of farmland.

But, farmland acres continue to disappear at an alarming rate, not just in Lancaster County but across the state. According to the Crop Reporting Services, United States Department of Agriculture more than 900,000 acres of Pennsylvania farmland were lost between 1975 and 1985. Some persons have questioned these figures, but they are the only reliable source available to us.

It doesn't matter if it's 700,000...900,000...or one million acres lost. The point is -- Pennsylvania is losing farmland that is almost impossible to replace. Driving down here today was a stark reminder to me about the importance of preserving farmland. The particular road, Route 283, that I was traveling came into being in my life time. It took several thousand acres of farmland to create that interstate, because for every mile of interstate it takes 60 acres of land.

Housing developments, shopping centers and other construction activities cover once valuable farmland. It's too late and in some cases too costly to save thousands of acres of farmland, but we have a golden opportunity to get a start in this process called farmland preservation.

Keith Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, said his organization has been working for this day since it adopted its farmland preservation policy in 1975. "Look around you," Eckel said, referring to the farmers bringing the fruits of the land to the market. "This is our heritage. But it's also our future. Speaking optimistically, Eckel continued, "When the referendum is approved, we will start a journey that will lead to a more prosperous agri business in the commwealth because we are starting the process of preserving our most important resource in Pennsylvania--farmland.

This program is a voluntary one. The farmer will not be forced to participate. The farmer will not be forced to shoulder the total financial burden if the local community decides to preserve farmland. Young farmers can plan their farming operations once the development rights are purchased. They are free to farm instead of worrying about how long the farm will be there.

At the kickoff of the Pennsylvania campaign to secure a yes vote for the nonbinding $100 million farmland bond referendum are (L to R) Keith Eckel, president Pennsylvania Farmers' Association; Dr. Maurice Goddard, chairman State Vote "Yes" committee and state Senator Noah Wenger.

For all the citizens it is an effort to save our heritage, a way of life and our future production of quality food and fiber products.

Introducing the speakers and adding his support to the program was state Senator Noah Wenger (R) 36th Senatorial District. Wenger said, "We have been concerned in this area about the disappearance of agriculture for a long time. We in the legislature took action in 1981 that made provision to establish agricultural areas and then authorized counties to purchase development easements in those agricultural areas. That bill was passed with tremendous support, but we did not at that time provide any state funds to support our actions. We knew at some time in the future this step would need to be taken so the program could reach its potential. This year we have the opportunity because there will be a question on the ballot, which will provide for state funds to go to the local county level to expand the program and assure a continuity of agriculture on our fine farms in Pennsylvania. It's an important step, and we hope it will be approved by the electret."

The referendum on the November 3, 1987, ballot will ask voters to approve the sale of state bonds to raise $100 million for a farmland preservation program. If approved, the money will be used to purchase agricultural conservation easements (development rights) from farmland owners. Once the development rights are purchased the farmland cannot be developed for a specific period of time.

In concluding his remarks, Dr. Goddard said, "I personally have been associated with many major efforts to conserve and make wise use of our natural resources. Never in my professional life have I had a greater opportunity to preserve one of our most precious natural resources--farmland. Ladies and gentlemen, you need to vote "yes" on the Save Farmland Referendum at the November 3rd election," Goddard declared.

A PEEK INTO THE FUTURE

Economists, stock market enthusiasts and a whole host of people are interested in what the future holds. In fact, just about anyone — who buys or sells anything — thinks to some extent whether the price is the "right price." Most everyone when wanting to buy or sell (a house, a farm, some land, a car, a tractor) wonders "if the time is right" to buy or sell, and, whether it might be better to wait for more favorable circumstances. When people are interested in the future it seems they really would like to know what to expect or how to adjust or control their destiny.

Control Is Slipping Away

Agriculture, when compared with nonagriculture, never really had much control over its destiny. In addition to the uncertainties of weather, insects, disease, and crop and livestock peculiarities, agriculture has always been faced the specter of overproduction. And with only a little overproduction, prices can really drop drastically... unless the government gets into the act to help farmers with propped-up prices by buying and storing or some other manipulations. All of this really hasn't changed much. The government is still involved — to a much larger extent — and even though farm subsidies are monstrous, it seems unlikely that our politicians will significantly reduce farm program assistance.

In all likelihood, efforts will be made to gradually try to wean farmers away from expensive, ineffective and unfair programs. At least one hopes so. But, then, in this regard, how successful have our politicians been in the past? We'd have to 'second' a colleague's observation that we are entering the "funny season" — earlier than usual — because next year is a big election year. So the chances are that political parties and candidates will have Christmas for everyone. So? So, the farm segment of our economy finds that much of their market control and influence exists in Washington. (Gee, no wonder economists have a hard time plying their trade. How does one figure-out what the politicans will or won't do?)

Inflation Ahead?

A new congressional report released in mid-July indicates the recent rise in inflation is a warning signal. The proper response in dampening inflation is with tighter monetary policy but tightening is becoming more difficult because of the huge federal deficit. With a falling dollar and rising oil prices some additional inflation was inevitable.

Now incidentally, most everyone probably knows that the Federal Reserve Board Chairman has been Paul Volcker who recently resigned. Designated to succeed Volcker is Alan Greenspan. Both individuals are top-notch economists. Volcker and his Fed crew were responsible for getting inflation under control, and watching to see that inflation stays in its cage. (The inflation rate was 11.3% in 1979 when Volcker became chairman of the Fed. Last year inflation was 1.9% and this year it's expected to be about 4%) Volcker guided our economy back to moderate inflation after three years of double-digit inflation and he restored a sense of control after a period of rampant price speculation and economic uncertainty.

The Fed, in our humble estimation, has been the major steadying influence for our economy. (In fact we wouldn't mind at all if Congress would expand the Fed's influence, to include fiscal policy (spending and taxing) as well as its monetary policy (money supply) role. Then, the Fed could, for instance, say to Congress and the President that government spending will be x amount of dollars — no more — and allocate it as you will but x amount is all you can have.) So? Even though Alan Greenspan has similar views as Volcker, keep an eye on the Fed because if the Fed has less latitude with the big, and getting bigger, federal deficit, the Fed may not be able to slow inflation by tightening money growth. The major threat, without reductions in the budget deficit, is that the Fed will have a narrower path to travel in attempting to avoid either a recession or inflatin. Be a Fed watcher.

And, the Economic Outlook?

Except a boring outlook. Only modest gains in GNP are expected in the second half of 1987. No boom but no bust. Just steady uninteresting growth. Most forecasters are saying that the economy is sure to continue to expand for the next three months. If that happens our boring outlook will have become the longest peacetime period of recession-free growth in U.S. history. (The longest peacetime expansion went from early 1975 to early 1980 - 58 months; this was still short of the 106-month expansion of 1961-1969 which included much of the Vietnam War. The average expansion is 33 months long for business cycle upswings, peacetime and wartime).

Blue Chip Economic Indicators, a Sedona, Arizona newsletter, regularly polls 51 analysts on what's ahead for business. The latest survey shows Blue Chip economists, in general, expecting a prolonged period of unexciting growth.. predicting real GNP (adjusted for price measures) to be 2.6% in the third quarter, 2.8% in the fourth quarter and 3.1% in the first quarter of 1988 with smaller gains during the rest of 1988.

Interest Rate?

Blue Chip also expects unemployment to remain a triffle above 6%, where it's recently been. Interest rates are expected to rise but only slightly. And a slight pickup is also forseen in the inflation rate.

Yep, dull and uninteresting but we'll take a dull expansion anytime over a less-welcome alternative.

Red & White Named Manheim Fair Grand Champion Holstein

BY PAT PURCELL

MANHEIM — For the first time in Manheim fair history a red and white Holstein was chosen as the Holstein grand champion of the dairy show.

Owned by Lowell and Deb Brubaker of Hilltop Heritage Farm in Mount Joy this red and white Holstein six-year-old, H.H. Triple Threat Sugar, has a production record of 23,879 pounds of milk and 849 pounds of fat.

Brubaker was pleased with the win, but somewhat surprised. This was the first show for Sugar this year. Why so late in the showing season did he decide to exhibit the red and white cow?

"She is a real good red cow and we decided to show her because she really looked good in the barn. She has eye appeal," said Brubaker.

Brubaker also exhibited the reserve grand champion, Penn-Har-Va Sexy Tammy, a 6-year-old red and white cow. This prefix comes from Lowell's parents' farm. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brubaker also live in the Mount Joy vicinity.

Sugar is classified as VG-87 with an excellent mammary system and Tammy also has the same numbers with an excellent mammary system. The last time Lowell exhibited a grand champion at the Manheim Fair was three years ago.

Hill Top Heritage Farm milks 130 Holsteins in its 300-head herd and has a rolling herd average of 17,600 pounds of milk with 587 pounds of fat with a BAA of 103.

Sugar has produced 14 pregnancies sired by Elevation for the Brubakers.

Deb (left) and Lowell Brubaker (right) swept the Holstein grand championships at the Manheim Fair. Brubaker's red and white was the first red cow to take the Holstein title in the fair history.

In the Guernsey division a brother and sister teamed up for the entire show for this colored breed. Kari Harnish, 10, exhibited her intermediate heifer calf and took the junior championship. Her brother Daryl, 9, took the reserve junior title with his junior heifer calf. Their parents are Gerald and Cheryl Harnish of Yellowgoose Road, Lancaster.

Show judge was Lloyd E. Ebersole from Sire Power.

E-Town Students Capture Major Manheim Sheep Show Titles

BY LOU ANN GOOD

MANHEIM — Three Elizabethtown students captured top awards at Lancaster County's final annual Farm Show held in Manheim on Thursday night.

Eleven-year-old Mark Tracy claims, "It's been a good season for me."

Mark isn't kidding. The son of Gerald and Helen Tracy swept both major titles in the show with his southdown sheep named Supreme Champion and his 121-pound suffolk named the grand champion market lamb.

Nine-year-old Aaron Groff, in his second year of showing, surprised himself with claiming both the champion market lamb and the reserve market lamb awards. The son of Joseph and Ginger Groff, Elizabethtown, took his success in stride and simply said, "I feel pretty good." He and his sister Kerri Groff, who placed first in novice showmanship, showed three market lambs purchased from Elvin Yeagley.

Elizabethtown High School senior, Phil Yeagley, won the reseve champion sale lamb with his 106-pound suffolk that he purchased from Greystone Manor. The son of Elvin and Jestena Yeagley, he has been showing sheep for eight years.

Tim Hall, a Suffolk breeder from Dalmatia, judged the 135 entries.

Crawford Co. Annual PFA Meeting Held

BY CAROLYN GILLES
Crawford Co. Correspondent

MEADVILLE — Approximately 60 were in attendance at the Crawford County PFA Annual Dinner Meeting held on October 1 at the Meadville Days Inn. Guests introduced by Crawford County President Dave Byler were Regional Director of the Dept. of Agriculture Linda Field, County Commissioner's wife Mrs. Gene Rumsey, Contender for office of Register & Recorder Toni Allegretti, D.A. John Dawson (representing Commissioners Rumsey and Rose), Bill White representing PFA Farm Management and Insurance Agent Brian Peterson.

Mel Eckhouse represented PFA at the meeting. Also in attendance were Secretary-Treasurer Sandy Byham, Board Members Milton Schweitzer, Helen and George Townley, Roger Simpson and Chairperson for the Women's Committee Terry Brunst. Following introductions, PA Maple Sweetheart Paula Holabaugh of Guys Mills, NW Pa Lamb and Wool Princess Emily Oberrath of Guys Mills, and current Crawford County Dairy Princess Junia Laughery were called upon for remarks. Holabough summarized her responsibilities as recently crowned statewide representative of the maple industry. Oberrath spoke in anticipation of her competition in the state pageant for PA Lamb and Wool Queen. Laughery recounted her experiences at the State Dairy Pageant and reminded all present of the importance of supporting commodity programs.

Byler introduced Renee Miller who with Michelle Schweitzer represented Crawford County at the PFA Youth Conference held at Bucknell University. Miller reported on the conference gave examples of activities such as a PFA board meeting and opportunities to learn about the buying and selling of stock.

State Board Member James Glover reported that Penmar, a company that PFA had invested in, had gone bankrupt and was selling off in an orderly fashion. It was uncertain how much of the investment would be lost. He reported that PFA was "pretty much right on budget." He also reported that PFA had sold their stock in Farm Family back to the Farm Bureau.

Region IV Organizational Director Bob Steider spoke about the upcoming referendum on the November 3rd ballot where voters will be asked to approve the sale of state bonds to raise $100 million for the preservation of PA farmland. He urged a "yes vote," stating that agriculture is the number one industry in Pennsylvania. He said the state reaps a $57 million cash return from agricultural products and $75 million in agriculture related real estate taxes. Steider further stated that one in five Pennsylvanians are employed in agriculture. Of the upcoming vote, Steider said, "We are in the 9th inning in the last game of the world series. If we don't succeed now, it will be a long time until we have the chance again."

Steider encouraged those in attendance to work together to grow strong as an organization. He said that leaders look to PFA as a strong lobbying unit. Steider said that local membership has fallen from 450 to 332 but that Local Membership Chairman Bob Cunningham was committed working hard to bring the membership up to goal.

An incentive hat has been offered to each member who brings in two new members. The only way to get the hat is by recruiting; it is not for sale. Incentives for membership were cited as PFA's farm management service, insurance, and the purchasing and marketing programs.

Past President and former board member Jean Scouten was given special recognition by the association for outstanding service to PFA since 1974. President Dave Byler presented her with a plaque and Bob Steider commended her saying, "If you needed something done this week, it was done. That's what made her such a valuable board member to work with."

Wayne Stambrook was called upon to present nominations for the local board. Nominations were: Richard Byham, Joe Schmidt, Roger Simpson, Tom Telliho, and Miles Beard. Those assembled cast a unanimous vote for all five members.

At this point, a failed electrical transformer plunged the room into darkness and Policy Chairman Jack Post conducted the discussion and voting on policy recommendations by candlelight.

Resolutions that were passed as recommendations were:

* That Dairy Herd Buyout be used on a regional basis as a form of supply management when the milk supply is excessive on the national level;
* That a landowner have first right to purchase mineral, oil and gas rights for his/her own property if a transaction occurs;
* That the PA Dept. of Agriculture allow Health Certificates for shipment of cattle to be processed and issued from Region I and III offices;
* That PFA should live within the means of the dues;
* That PFA should educate their members more in how to use the government farm programs through the Voice and/or county newsletters.
* That there be a 5-cent increase in deduction for milk promotion in lieu of a 50-cent cut in national minumum support price of milk on a yearly basis.
* That to keep policies current, policies that are of interest should be included in a survey of members, possibly included as part of the Voice mailing.

Issues that were discussed and defeated had to do with random quality and taste checks by the Dept. of Health on food outlets and public schools, eliminating sales tax from shipping and handling charges, and collecting the $1 per head deduction for beef promotion only at the time of slaughter. In reference to the group's concern on the quality of milk handling, Eckhouse shared an idea that had come up in another county to periodically give an award to stores for high quality milk handling, listing the criterea for the award to promote better handling practices.

Joan Black was cited as contact for the Promotion of the Farmland Vote. Anyone desiring to contribute to paid advertising on the farmland issue may contact Joan at 763-3799.

World Expo Honors Men and Women Devoted To Dairy Industry

MADISON, WISCONSIN — The World Dairy Expo, the world's premier trade show for dairy farmers, was held this week at the Dane County Exposition Center in Madison, Wisconsin. The show is the largest of its kind and celebrated its 21st anniversary this week of service to the dairy farm family.

All who attended were certain to gain new knowledge of the dairy industry with 400 commercial exhibitors displaying the latest available dairy farm technology, products and services. More than 1600 head of the finest show cattle in North America competed in the National shows for the Ayshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Holstein and the Milking Shorthorn breeds and also the Midwest Regional Jersey Show.

Two Holstein cattle sales, as well as sales of each of the other five breds competing at the show, offered the best genetics available from each breed. The sale line-up started with the World Premier Colored Breeds Sale featuring the five colored breeds competing at the show.

NATIONAL DAIRY WOMAN ANNOUNCED

Imogene Woodside of LaCenter, Washington has been named as the World Dairy Expo's 1987 National Dairy Woman. The National Dairy Woman must be an active partner in the farm operation with her selection based on contributions to the farm, family and community. A Tennessee native, Imogene Woodside joined Stuart, her husband of 45 years, in farming just after World War II.

The 350 acre Sammamish Farms is now operated in partnership with son, Ray and daughter-in-law, Merry, and boasts a rolling herd lactation average of 21,211 pounds of milk and 771 pounds of fat at 3.62% test. Protein solids are at 662 pounds and the BAA stands at 102.3 on the 130 head of registered Holstein herd. The herd includes a 3E cow and 18 Very Good herdmates. Recipient of the Washington State Herd Management Award in 1976, the family also holds membership in district, state and national Holstein Associations and the herd has achieved numerous milk quality awards.

Although Imogene worked off the farm for many years, she has maintained an active role as a responsible partner in the management of the dairy and has found time as well tobe actively involved in numerous agriculture and dairy promotion activities and groups. Mrs. Woodside initiates dairy promotion at the grass roots level. Over the years, thousands of school children have visited their farm. Imogne churns butter at schools to further promote dairy products.

Mrs. Woodside is known for giving 100% effort to any project into which she enters - ranging from getting positive agricultural information into local newspapers to statewide and regional promotional programs to national arenas. Imogene just finished a term as Chairwoman of the Washington Dairy Products Commission. During nine years as the elected representative for six southwest Washington counties on the Commission, she served as a member of the Boards of Directors of Washington State Dairy Council, as a delegate to the Oregon's Dairymen's association annual meeting, participated in numerous seminars and workshops.

The National Dairy Woman Program is sponsored annually by Associated Milk Producers, Inc., Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., Alto-Golden Guernsey Dairy and The Swiss Valley Farm Dairymen.

CANADIAN NAMED INT'L PERSON OF THE YEAR

George Murray Clemons of Ontario, Canada, a former Secretary-Manager of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada was honored by the World Expo as the 1987 "International Person of the Year." This award must be presented to someone who is from a country other than the United States and who has made contributions to the dairy industry on an international level.

Clemons was raised in the tradition of service to the Holstein breed. His grandfather was Secretary of the Association from 1893 to 1912 and his father succeeded his grandfather. Clemons joined the Holstein-Friesian Association in 1925. He became Secretary in 1930 and remained at the helm for 43 years.

Although most remembered for his major contributions to the Canadian Holstein industry in the exploration and development of the foreign market, many significant milestones occurred on the domestic front during Clemons's tenure as well. Among these was the initiation of Selective Registration; the Black and White Show Program, a procedure for early registration; and the National Identification Program for grades. Registrations leaped from 22,400 in 1930 to over 98,000 and the budget to support the Canadian Association and its program from $82,000 to nearly $900,000.

Clemon's trade promotional activity spans the globe and several decades. He has visited all the major dairy countries of the world on a number of occasions over a period of 25 years to promote interest in Canadian Holsteins. This "elder statesman" utilized various means of opening markets ranging form follow-ups on personal intiatives to participation in government trade missions to trade fairs and exhibits. Personal initiatives accounted for major breakthroughs in Mexico, Italy, France, Chile, Peru, Argentina, Colombia and Brazil. Trade missions helped to open markets in Spain, Portugal, Japan, Korea, and Belgium. He has judged national shows in Chile, Peru and Barbados; and conducted type classification in Mexico, Italy and Barbados. He also helped to establish the World Conference of Holstein (Friesian) Associations and has participated in all of them.

INDUSTRY PERSON OF THE YEAR

Dr. James Crowley, Dairy Extension Specialist at the University of Wisconsin was named the World Dairy Expo "Industry Person of the Year." He has taught hundreds of nutrition-related field days, meetings, conferences and teleconferences for dairy farmers and other industry professional. An internationally known dairy nutritionist, Dr. Crowley helped establish Wisconsin's quality forage program which helps dairy farmers reduce purchased protein supplements.

Dr. Crowley writes regularly for farm and dairy magazines, using the medium to get practical advice to farmers. For ten years the regular dairy feeding section in Hoard's Dairyman was written by Dr. Crowley. He is respected for his ability to adapt basic research results to commercial dairying and most of all is admired for his unique ability to communicate sound advice to dairymen. In heavy demand as a speaker at national dairy meetings, he is sought after for his ability to combine humor and scientific data in a way that is appealing and understandable to any audience.

Dr. Crowley's continous service on a host of College of Agriculture and Life Science committees has been highly beneficial in research, teaching and extension policy and programming. He is the 1987 recipient of the Distinguished Service award presented by the American Dairy Science Association at their annual meeting in June. This award is presented to recognize unusual, outstanding and consistent contributions to the welfare of the dairy industry.

Minnesota Guernsey Breeder Named By World Expo 'Man Of The Year'

MADISON, WISCONSIN — Russell J. Wirt, a well-known Guernsey Breeder from Lewiston, Minnesota has been selected as the recipient of the World Dairy Expo's 1987 Man of the Year award. Wirt operates the Maple Leaf Farm in partnership with his wife, Donna and three sons, J. Duane, Doug and Dennis. The farm was homesteaded in 1856 by Russell's great grandfather with the sixth generation now residing on the home farm. Russell began farming in 1950 in partnership with his father,Elmer. The farm has grown to a total of 790 acres which supports 145 head of milking cows and over 150 head of heifers and calves.

The constantly improving DHIA herd average currently stands at 13,500 lbs. of milk, 605 pounds of fat and 500 pounds of protein. The herd has won many production awards as well as awards for Premier Breeder and Premier Exhibitor at various fairs including the Minnesota State Fair.

The herd currently includes four cows on the breed's top 300 CPI List and has four bulls in young sire programs. The status of Gold Star Breeder has been attained eight times. Cattle sold by the Wirt's have always been worthy representatives of the herd and have promoted the Guernsey breed. Maple Leaf Farm has also developed several cows with over 1,000 pounds of fat or 20,000 pounds of milk in a given lactation, including Maple Leaf Farm Lizette with a lifetime record of over 182,000 pounds of milk.

Wirt has been a local 4-H Club leader, served as Secretary of his county and state DHIA organizaitons, member of Minnesota Farm Bureau, Chairman of his county and Alternate Director of his state Ameircan Dairy Associations, Director of the Minnesota Dairy Research and Promotion Board and has served on the Advisory Committees of the University of Minnesota ASgriculture Institute.

Mr. Wirt's involvement in the Guernsey breed includes membership in state and national Guernsey breed associations. He currently has eleven females in his herd from the Guernsey Genetic Growth Program. This program involves bringing other breed genes into the Guernsey breed with the criteria that bulls from those other breeds be at 80% of cheese yield in order to qualify for the program. It is the belief of propronents that, although the program may result in a reduction in purity over the short term, the breed can in the long run have greater purity along with higher performance than would otherwise have been possible.

Wirt has been active in dairy cattle judging and has judged shows in Australia and Africa. He was inducted into the Minnesota Livestock Breeders Assocaition Hall of Fame in 1981 and elected to the Kentucky Colonel Club in 1984. In 1964 the Wirt family was honored as the Minnesota American Dairy Association Farm Family.

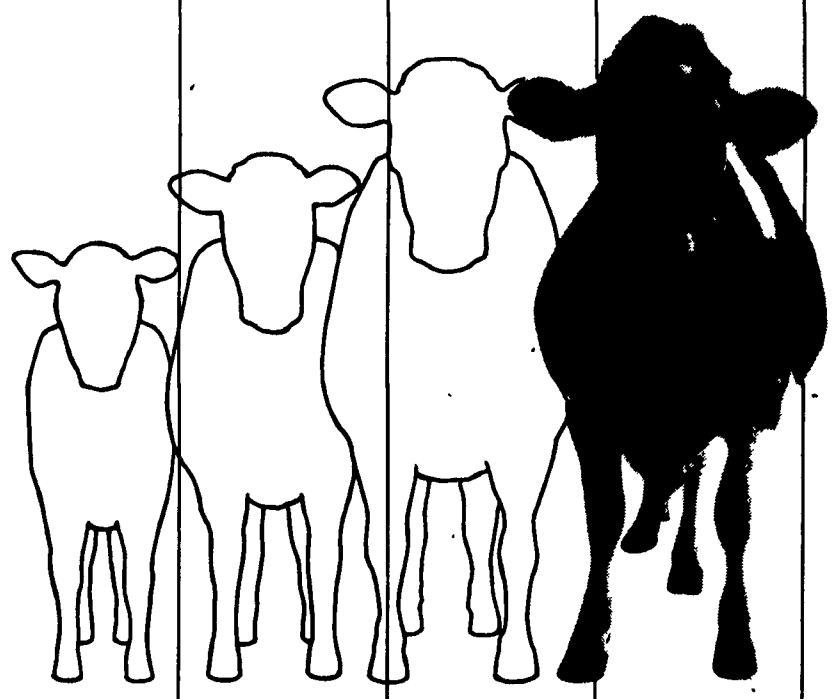
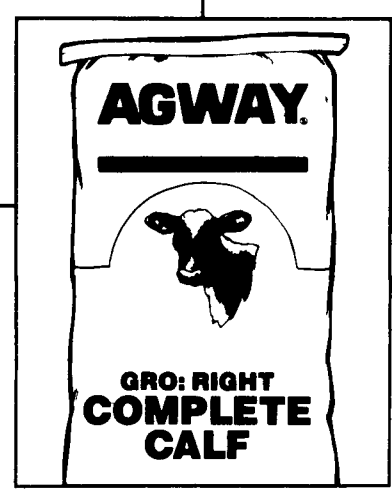
EXTRA PROFITABLE WAY TO FEED CALVES

1 MONTH | 4 MONTHS | 7 MONTHS | 10 MONTHS | 14 MONTHS | 20 MONTHS



Freshen faster with new Agway Gro:Right.™



Every calf you raise costs about $60 a month for forage and labor. So if you could breed them at 14 months (6 months earlier than average), they'd freshen at 24 months and you'd save $360 on each calf. Not to mention the profits from 6 extra months of milking.

New Agway Gro:Right Complete Calf Feed can help you do that. It's an improved version of our Total Calf Ration, the brand Northeastern farmers have been using since 1976 to maximize calf-raising efficiency. We've added milk protein and B vitamin complex for rapid growth and efficient energy usage. So calves raised on Agway Complete Calf reach breeding weight in 14 months and join the milking string in 24 months.

Save hundreds, even thousands of dollars down the road. For more information, contact your Agway Store or Farm Enterprise Salesperson.

Agway Schedules Annual Meeting In Syracuse

Syracuse, NY — Several thousand farmers and guests will gather for the 23rd annual meeting of Agway Inc. October 29-30 at the Onondaga County War Memorial in Syracuse, NY.

Reports by Richard Croner, chairman of the board of directors, and William A. Hiller, president and chief executive officer will be highlights on Thursday, October 29. Six farmers will be elected by the members present to three-year terms on the 18-member Agway board of directors.

Two seminars on issues facing farmers will be held Thursday morning, October 29, at the nearby Hotel Syracuse.

The popular Agway farm show in the lower level of the War Memorial will feature new action exhibits and displays of new feeds, crop varieties, and other products and services designed specifically for Northeast farmers.

Thursday evening Agway members, employees, and representatives of many veterans, youth, community, and other groups will attend an entertainment program featuring the famed Pipes and Drums of the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards, Scotland's senior cavalry regiment.

Friday morning, October 30, members have an opportunity to question senior Agway managers on a wide variety of topics during the free-wheeling open forum.

Agway is owned by 102,000 farmer-members in 12 northeastern states and is headquartered in Syracuse, NY.

Eastern Milk Co-op

Donovan said that the dairy diversion program, followed by the more recent whole herd buy-out, forced a shift from surplus to shortage in the Northeast in the past two and a half years. In 1986 alone, the Northeast suffered a net loss of 2,500 dairy farmers.

Eastern and other Northeast co-ops, Donovan said, are facing a new challenge today -- a challenge just the opposite of the one Eastern faced several years ago when it entered into a joint venture with cheese-maker Leprino Foods and opened the largest mozarella plant in the Eastern United States. During times of surplus, the plant helped balance milk supplies in New York and Pennsylvania, annually absorbing 700 million pounds of milk and producing 70 million pounds of cheese for the pizza and restaurant industries.

Now, Donovan said, the co-op is faced with the challenge of reducing contractual commitments to consumers. The co-op also at certain times has bought outside supplies of milk to meet contracts, which impacted directly on profitability, he said.

Forwood explained that Eastern, as a co-op, is essentially a marketing arm for its members. It guarantees that members will get paid for the milk they produce, he said.

Eastern recorded milk-related sales of $298.6 million for fiscal '87, which ended March 31, and sales of $72.9 million for the first quarter of the 1988 fiscal year (April-June, 1987). Most of that money was passed on to the farmers to pay for the milk they produced -- an amount of milk equivalent to more than 1.1 billion quarts in fiscal '87. Proceeds for the co-op amounted to $233,000 for fiscal '87 and $24,000 for the first quarter in fiscal '88.

The 1986 fiscal year saw proceeds of $631,000, sales of $323.6 million, and the handling of the equivalent of 1.3 billion quarts of milk.

Sales continued at record levels for Eastern's Products Division, which operates a chain of dairy stores and a truck route delivery system serving rural communities in 11 states. The division, which opened two new stores in fiscal '87, posted sales of $7.5 million, up from $7 million for the year before.

At Eastern's annual banquet Tuesday evening Karl and Constance Haslauer, Munnsville, N.Y., were named Eastern's Quality Farmer of the Year for 1987.

At the same time, the cooperative announced top quality farmers for New England and for the Pennsylvania and South region -- Shelburne Farms of Shelburne, VT, and Richard and Sheryl Groover of Canton, respectively.

Eastern also named John G. Maroney Sr. of Montgomery, NY, as its Field Representative of the Year for outstanding service to farmers, and presented its annual Agricultural Press Award to Everett Newswanger, managing editor of Lancaster Farming for outstanding reporting.

The banquet attracted between 500 and 600 farmers, dairy industry officials, and various government and political figures. The main speaker was Buckey Jones, four-time recipient of the Mississippi Master Farmer Award.

Cleanliness has become a hallmark for the Haslauers, going back to Karl's father and his father's father.

"I've known this dairy since 1965," Eastern's Quality Assurance Manager Ken Slentz noted. "They've always produced good quality milk."

The Haslauer dairy has a brand new pipeline system (installed in July), a herd of 62 milkers, and some 20 head of young stock.

Karl's parents, Ernest and Genevieve, are retired Eastern members who still help out on the farm. Karl says his three daughters (Laurel, 16; Lisa, 15; and Julie, 11) are a big help, too, handling everything from unloading hay to feeding the cows and calves. The Haslauers also have a 22-month-old son, Andrew.

"Eastern already had been paying preiums for quality milk, so this year we took the next logical step and started a quality awards program," Slentz said. "The program honors members who produce quality milk all year long."

Eastern's computer system made it possible to track down all the producers meeting the standards for this new quality recognition program. The result: Over 300 farms consistently met the standards, and will be receiving Certificates of Quality Achievement.

The computer also selected the top 10 quality producers who will receive special plaques. Out of the top 10, the computer also tapped the top quality producers for New England, New York, and the Pennsylvania and South region, and from those three, the Haslauers were chosen the 1987 Quality Farmers of the Year.

Other top ten Quality Farmers include: JR and Linda Allen, Dundee, NY; John and Helen Brown, Forksville; Kraham Bros., Cooperstown, NY; Mark Longacre, Susquehanna; Arnold and Sandra Rock, Worcester, NY; Hugh Rutherford, Walton, NY; and Richard and Joanne Tice, Troy, PA.

Eastern, with 3,700 member farmers in nine states, owns cheese plants in Horseheads and Waverly, NY; and operates stores in Fulton and Newark, NY, and Canton, Troy, Washingtonville and Wellsboro, PA.

LF Editor

of professional dedication to the agricultural community and the dairy industry in particular.

In accepting the award, Newswanger expressed his desire to be part of the solution to the farm problem rather than to be part of it. "If this award," Newswanger said, "indicates in a small measure some success in this heartfelt desire then I gratefully and humbly accept it in that light--quickly recognizing the need for wisdom from above to live up to the standards set before me by this award."

In a separate event the next day, for the second year in a row, Newswanger won the Photo Journalism Award presented by the Northeast Farm Communicators Association. The work was judged best in class in the Northeast Farm Communicator's Annual Journalism contest. The organization of farm writers, editors, radio commentators and public relations persons announced the results of the contest at their annual meeting held in conjunction with the Eastern Milk Producers meeting.

Manheim Youth Is A Winner Two Times Over

The steer shown by David Cassel of Manheim was declared grand champion of the show. Melanie Rohrer, the Manheim Farm Show Queen, presented him with a trophy.

MANHEIM — David Cassel son of Mr. and Mrs. Marlin Cassel of Manheim had another grand champion at the Farm Show here Tuesday night, and he was there to see it this time.

David entered his light heavyweight steer, Jake, in the baby beef competition and took top honors. On the previous night, David's hog was judged grand champion. But David couldn't be there as he was milking the family's dairy cows — a job his father normally does but couldn't because his ribs were broken.

The heavy-muscled steer is the first that David has exhibited. To prepare for the show, David spent the last month walking Jake up and down his farm's tobacco patch. The preparation paid off, not only did David have the grand champion, but he won the senior showmanship contest.

The other winners at the show are:

Pennfield Cuts Ribbon On New Mt. Joy Plant

MOUNT JOY, Pa. — Thousands of guests attended Open House festivities on Friday (October 2) and Saturday (October 3) at Pennfield Corporation's new $8 million feed mill located in the Mount Joy Industrial Park.

An official ribbon-cutting Friday evening kicked off the two day agricultural festival where visitors toured the mill and enjoyed refreshments, displays, and entertainment. Participating in the ribbon-cutting ceremony were Pennfield officials Ernest O. Horn, Jr., Chairman of the Board; Donald E. Horn, President; Ray Lehr, Vice-President, Feed Marketing; Mike Horn, Vice-President, Feed Operations; Richard Hobday, Vice-President, Finance; and Kenneth Greenwood, Director of Milling Operations.

Called "the most modern mill in the world" by feed industry specialists, the new facility solidifies Pennfield's position as the largest Pennsylvania-based feed manufacturer. According to Greenwood, the new plant is capable of producing 75 tons of dairy and livestock feed per hour, bringing the company's annual tonnage capability to 800,000 tons.

The mill is a fully automated feed manufacturing operation, with all processes from ingredient handling to pellet making completely computerized. Its uniqueness is attributable to its application as a research and development facility, jointly designed by Pennfield and the mill's builder, Sprout-Bauer, of Muncy, PA. As a result, the mill's equipment and control system is engineered to accept improvements in the technology of feed manufacturing immediately as they become available. "It is the feature that will enable Pennfield to stay on the leading edge of any and all improvements in our industry", says Greenwood.

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

- State Secretary of Agriculture William L. Henning has commended the alertness of a Bureau of Plant Industry inspector who discovered gypsy moth egg masses on a poultry crate near the State Farm Show Building.

Henning announced that the timely action of Milton Searfoss of Avoca, Luzerne County, could well have checked a possible infestation of the Harrisburg area by dreaded gypsy moth caterpillars which completely defoliate trees and shrubbery.

- Twenty-five steers sold at New Holland Thursday by members of the New Holland Baby Beef Club averaged $30.35 a hundredweight.

The Grand Champion, a Hereford, was shown by Harold Leaman, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Leaman, R5, Lancaster, and sold for $50 a hundred.

- Two of America's best-known cowboy and cowgirl TV and western movie stars- Gene Autry and Annie Oakley will be featured at the World Championship Rodeo to be held at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Arena in Harrisburg, Nov. 12 through 16.

- A senior at Manheim Central High School, Marlin Cassel, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Cassel, R1 Manheim, showed his Angus steer, Blackie, to the Grand Championship at the Manheim Fair.

Reserve Championship was taken by Miss Martha Long, who also showed an Angus.

- Visitors from 14 states gathered this week to witness one of the greatest accumulations of modern poultry equipment and educational displays and supplies, contests and events, talks ever staged under one roof.

Strawbridge And McCleary Strike Again

HARRISBURG — A York County swine breeder whisked away the competition again as they had in previous shows during the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition. Strawbridge & McCleary from Windsor, Pennsylvania exhibited reserve champion boar, champion gilt and reserve champion gilt. They also did very well in the Hampshire competition.

Smith's Hog Farm from Washington, Pennsylvania (Washington County), showed the champion boar and took home a blue ribbon.

The Keystone International Livestock Exhibition is an annual event sponsored by the Pennsylvania Livestock Association in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture and the Farm Products Show Commission. Exhibitors from 25 states are expected to compete this year for approximately $95,000 in premiums. Increased premiums were added in the swine department last year.

John Strawbridge captured the 1987 KILE Yorkshire gilt championship and again received the premier breeder award as he has for almost every year in the 31-year history of KILE.

Ohio Breeder Sweeps Berkshire Competition

Mapes Family Berkshires from Unionville Center, Ohio, swept away the competition in the Berkshire Breeding Swine competition by showing the champion boar, the reserve champion boar and the champion gilt, attained by winning the additional titles of February boar, March boar, January gilt and April gilt.

The reserve champion gilt was won by the exhibitor Jeff Wippel from Ashville, Ohio.

Indiana Breeder Shows Champion Poland China Boar

In addition to winning the titles of March boar and February gilt, Leland Mapes & Family from Unionville Center, Ohio, received ribbons for showing the reserve champion boar and champion gilt. The champion boar belonged to Kevin & Amy Cheshier of Greenfield, Indiana.

Pennsylvania Leads KILE Open Barrows On-Foot Contest

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania swine breeders captured most of the honors in Monday's judging of open barrow on-foot at the 31st annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) in the state Farm Show Building. The home state exhibitors captured the grand champion and reserve grand champion titles and won most of the awards in various breed classes.

The grand champion was exhibited by James Parlett of Airville, York Co., and the reserve grand champion by Shelby Heagy of Lebanon, Lebanon Co.

James Parlett also placed open champion barrow on-foot but the open reserve champion barrow on-foot was won by LaVern Weller of Dwight, IL. Shelby Heagy also won the junior champion barrow on-foot while the reserve junior champion barrow on-foot was won by Gus Parlett of Airville. The individual breed winners were:

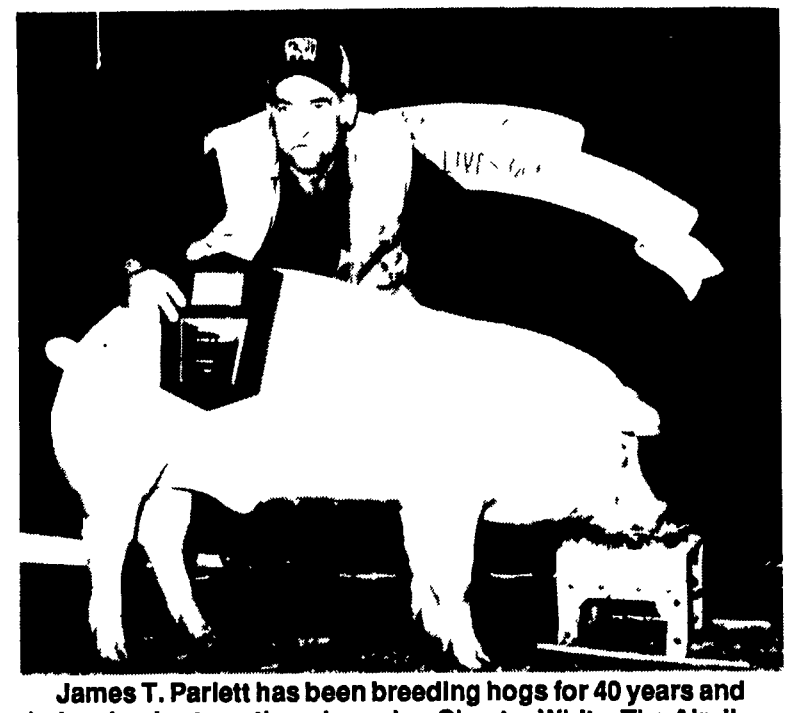
Luckily, besides football, Darren Grumbine of Myerstown, is interested in hogs. The Berkshire barrow that his father Dennis, (pictured), showed for him was champion of its division.

Penn State University raised the champion Yorkshire barrow. The hog was shown by herdsman Vernon Hazlett.



James T. Parlett has been breeding hogs for 40 years and he's raised yet another champion Chester White. The Airville, Pennsylvanian's barrow was the breed's champion and the open barrow grand champion.

The key to Keith Bard's success in raising spotted swine in his wife Mary Ellen, according to the Portage, Pa., man. She's doing something right because he showed another winner at KILE this year.

Hayes Named 1987 Livestock Man Of The Year

HARRISBURG — Representative Samuel E. Hayes, Jr. of Huntingdon was named the 1987 Livestock Man of the Year at the annual banquet and meeting of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association, held in conjunction with the 31st annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition. Hayes joins the prestigious list of 14 top men in the state, as the award began in 1973.

Hayes was elected to the State House of Representatives in 1970, being re-elected eight times since then. He represents the 81st legislative district which includes Huntingdon and Blair counties. He is presently House Minority Whip for the current session of the General Assembly. Hayes received his bachelors and master degrees from The Pennsylvania State University. He left the education profession to serve as a fulltime representative in 1970.

Among his many awards, Hayes has the Honorary Keystone Farmer Degree through the State FFA, Honorary American Farmer Degree sponsored by the national FFA, recipient of the Miracle Mile Award and Special Leadership Award through the Rural Electric Cooperative, Lawmaker of the Year Award in 1983, the Honorary Society of Agriculture-Gamma Sigma Delta, and the President's Award for Leadership through the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs.

"You can devise the best tools for mankind, but you have to go out and promote your products yourself," Hayes said regarding today's agricultural situation. "Agriculture has to be much more aggressive in promoting its products," he said.

"I believe very strongly that the first cornerstone of our economy is agriculture. You are the folks who sustain democracy. We will not have a strong United States of America if we don't have a strong agriculture," Hayes continued. "There IS a need for agriculture. Many future opportunities for growth in agriculture are still available today."

Hayes' committee assignments have included education, Subcommittee on Basic Education, State Government, Military and Veterans Affairs, Ethics and Rules.

His predecessors to the Livestock Man of the Year include Herman Purdy, Stanley Gates, Ben Morgan, John Henkel, Gilbert Watts, Henry Gruber, Max Smith, Dwight Younkin, Glen Kean, Herb Schick, Jesse Smith, Penrose Hallowell, Bill Gillespie and Peter Krall.

The Pennsylvania Livestock Association is a primary sponsor of the Keystone International Livestock Exposition in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Farm Show Commission.

MAMMA Board Elects Officers, Plans Fall Ads

TOWSON, MD. — The Board of Directors of the Advertising and Promotion Agency of the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area, met September 21-22 to elect officers, review its fall advertising programs and preview creative concepts for advertising milk in 1988.

The 19 member board elected Robert McSparran, Peach Bottom, Pa. to serve a three year term as chairman. McSparran had just completed a full term as vice chairman of the MAMMA Board and is currently president of Atlantic Dairy Cooperative. Elected to serve as vice chairman was Walter Martz, Walkersville, Md. Martz is also a member of the National Dairy Board and is president of Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association. Re-elected to three year terms were, Ivo V. Otto, Jr. as secretary, and Byron J. Meredith, Jr. as treasurer. Otto of Carlisle, Pa. is a director of Atlantic Dairy Cooperative. Meredith is division manager of Shenandoah's Pride Dairy, Springfield, Va.

Plans for the fall advertising schedule were reviewed by the Board. The major media buy for the fourth quarter includes five weeks of television for fluid milk beginning October 5. Commercials touting "Milk. It's Fitness You Can Drink" and featuring Olympic Coach John Thompson and tennis star Pam Shriver will air during this time in Philadelphia, Lancaster, Harrisburg, York, Baltimore and Washington. Then beginning November 23, the holiday television commercial, "The Dairy Farmer" will run for four weeks in the same markets. The "Dairy Farmer" commercial is set on a typical dairy farm and promotes the use of a wide variety of dairy products in holiday baking and entertaining.

Event Marketing With Collegiate Sports

MAMMA will be extending the fitness campaign through an exciting new channel this fall, "Event Marketing." Contracts have been signed to promote milk at football and basketball games with Temple University in Philadelphia and Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. MAMMA will be running a full-page program ad featuring Temple's youthful Football Coach, Bruce Arians, passing on some good advice to his football followers, to "Pass the milk . . . it's fitness you can drink." Humorous radio commercials with Coach Arians will also air four times in every broadcast of Temple football games. On October 10, the first 10,000 fans who come to Veterans Stadium to see Temple take on Tulsa, will receive a cow bell, with both MAMMA's logo and Temple's logo on it.

When the football season ends, MAMMA will be having a similar advertising program with Temple's nationally ranked basketball team. MAMMA will have four radio commercials, plus an opening and closing sponsor identification in every one of the 30 Temple games, both home and away.

Beginning in December and running through the end of February, a full-page ad will also appear in all Georgetown University Basketball programs. Featuring Coach John Thompson, the ad will be tied to a contest to guess the amount of milk he drinks. To the person who comes closest to guessing Thompson's milk consumption during a three-month period, the prize will be a trip for two to the Big East Basketball playoffs in New York's Madison Square Garden. The Georgetown advertising package includes a promotional item giveaway day and advertising during the games played at the Capitol Centre.

The Board of Directors of the Advertising and Promotion Agency of the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area elected a new slate of officers recently at the organization's annual meeting. Re-elected as officers were from left, Secretary - Ivo V. Otto and Treasurer - Byron J. Meredith. Elected to serve as Chairman - Robert McSparran and Vice Chairman - Walter Martz. These gentlemen will serve as officers for three years.

Milk Ski Package

In addition, to these collegiate sports promotions, skiers at Ski Roundtop, Ski Liberty and Wisp Ski Resort, will be seeing vibrant milk posters as they ride the ski lift. The ski lift billboards will promote milk and be up from the middle of November through February.

Tennis

MAMMA will again be associated with Pam Shriver and her Second Annual Cystic Fibrosis Tennis Tournament to be held at Loyola College in Baltimore, Thanksgiving weekend. During this event, a full-page program ad will advertise milk as, "the perfect serve." In addition, Pam Shriver Fitness booklets, published by MAMMA, will be distributed to everyone who attends the tournament the first night.

A Look Ahead At 1988

Following a review of the year-end advertising plans, the MAMMA Board previewed new creative concepts to advertise milk in 1988. The creative concept of promoting the family of milk . . . whole milk . . . lowfat milk . . . and skim milk, was approved for development. The idea is to convince the consumer that they have a choice and should drink the milk that fits their individual lifestyle. The campaign will position milk as, "Fitness You Can Drink," relying on the strength of this highly recognizable theme that continues to complement the active pursuits of millions of Americans and provide a strong reason for milk's consumption.

Since 1988 is the year of the Olympics, MAMMA will be bringing back its award winning television commercial "Olympic him to make up for a major feed shortfall, the result of harvesting only 15 percent of his normal hay and corn crops.

Emergency Feed Program

"Eligible counties" are those to which U.S. Department of Agriculture officials have granted "disaster emergency" status, either outright or through the contiguous county rule.

As of Oct. 2, 27 Keystone state counties were so designated and several more might be added to this list, according to Richard Pennay, a program specialist in the state ASCS office in Harrisburg. They stretch from Somerset across to Delaware along Pennsylvania's southern tier and northward through many of the counties along the Juniata and Susquehanna river valleys. In addition, all 26 counties in Maryland and Delaware also qualify, according to ASCS officials there.

The feed program is one of the two made available to farmers by the emergency designation; the other is a low-interest (4½ percent) Farmers Home Administration loan program. However, observers expect the feed program, which is both more accessible and capable of providing assistance that doesn't have to be paid back, to be used much more widely.

This expectation is borne out by the experience of Maryland and Delaware farmers last year, when the drought was more widespread there. In all, about $1.88 million in low-interest loans was extended to 28 farmers in the two states, according to FmHA officials. By contrast, the feed program provided more than $1.8 million in direct payments to 344 farmers in the two states, according to ASCS officials. In Virginia, where drought was also widespread, the program provided $7.5 million in assistance.

Moreover, a new restriction applies to the FmHA disaster loan program this year. In addition to traditional requirements involving cash flow and the inability to obtain credit elsewhere, for instance, farmers also must have insurance on "major enterprise" crops this year to qualify for the loans.

As in Maryland and Delaware, only a handful of Pennsylvania farmers have federal crop insurance. John Gartzeit, who heads the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation's regional office in Harrisburg, said only about 300 farmers statewide took out 1987 policies.

The crop insurance caveat does not extend to the emergency feed program, which has the same provisions as it did a year ago, Pennay said.

Among the key ones:

— To qualify, a farmer in an eligible county must be able to document crop losses of at least 40 percent from normal yields. For so-called "program crops" — those for which acreage reduction programs apply and many farmers have individual records on file at offices — ASCS will use what it calls "established yields." For non-program crops, which include corn grown for silage and hay crops, ASCS will use average values supplied by, say, Extension agents.

To a certain extent, farmers are trusted for supplying accurate estimates of yields and losses, according to ASCS spokesmen. But these are subject to the concurrence of county ASCS committee member and to the possibility of spot checks by ASCS personnel.

— For eligible farmers, feed needs will be determined by a standard formula that takes into account the number of animals to be fed and the amount of feed on hand. Feed needs will be figured for a period that begins the day of sign-up and extends through the end of the 1987-88 crop year: April 30 in most Maryland and Delaware counties, May 31 in many in Pennsylvania. All eligible livestock — including cattle, hogs, sheep and horses used in farm work — receive a value. The total of these "animal units" (a mature cow is 1.5 animal units) is multiplied by the number of days in the feeding period and a factor of 10 pounds per animal unit per day to determine the feed need. Any feed on hand, including what's harvested this year as well as purchased feed, is subtracted from this total. The remainder, expressed in pounds of grain equivalent, is the amount for which assistance is available.

This feed need cannot be greater than the cropping shortfall, a provision that tends to limit government assistance to actual drought losses among farmers who typically buy much of their feed.

— The sign-up deadline is Dec. 31.

— Two assistance options are available. Farmers can choose either to obtain stocks of grain under government storage at a price set at 75 percent of the county loan rate for that crop or to be reimbursed for up to 50 percent of the cost of buying extra feed. Given current prices and loan rates, the latter is by far the better deal, Pennay noted.

Indeed, last year, all of the hundreds of farmers who participated in the program in the Mid-Atlantic area chose the cost-share option, according to ASCS officials.

Under the cost-share option, farmers can obtain assistance on the urchase of virtually any feedstuff, including those already purchased during the current cropping year. A farmer eligible for cost sharing selected for their annual holstein sale.

Last Friday Donald Welk Jr., Strasburg, a junior, and David Troutman, Petersburg, a senior, were in the Lancaster area selecting cattle for the sale. And this editor caught up with them at Welk's home to take a look at one of the feature heifers. Born in January, the heifer's two nearest dams are Excellent and every cow for six generations back is classified VG87 or better. And all six have more than 100,000 pounds of milk lifetime.

"I had bought the calf as another foundation animal for my future herd," Welk said. "But we needed a few animals for the sale. So I decided to help the club since I'm a member."

Troutman added, "We have a bunch of really good animals coming like a VG87 2-year-old Tony, a Caprie ET calf out of an Excellent cow with 34,000 pounds of milk, a Chairman out of an Excellent cow with 25,000 pounds of milk and a Memorial granddaughter of the famous Elevation Sophia cow that is 4E93 with 1,256 of fat and nearly 30,000 pounds of milk."

Welk and Troutman agreed that students learn a lot from the experience of selecting animals for a sale and completing all the necessary work that goes into it. "One thing we've learned," Welk said, "is that it's often hard for a farmer to give up one of his good animals. And it's hard to be objective with your own cows."

The education goes along with the event that is planned as a fund raiser for the dairy science club. The Pennsylvania Holstein Association supervises the students, and along with the Backus Organization, manages the sale.

So while there will be no touchdowns scored with a football in the ag arena on November 7, it's rather certain that many points will be made in cow barns of the buyers across America by the excellent group of cattle put together for this year's Nittany Fall Classic. Be there!

Calcium" featuring Olympic Gymnast Helen Sjursen. A partial remake of the commercial will be done to include the new family of milk theme. Sjursen, a member of the 1948 U.S. Gymnast Team, does a work out on the uneven parallel bars in the commercial and explains how milk helps her keep her bones young.

Another one of MAMMA's milk spokespersons, John Thompson, will be featured in 1988. Thompson, who is basketball coach for the Georgetown Hoyas, is also the 1988 U.S. Olympic basketball coach. In 1988 Thompson will be endorsing the concept of choosing the milk that fits your lifestyle and reminding consumers that no matter what type of milk you drink it's still "Fitness You Can Drink."

Farm Philosophy

By Newton Bair

PERSPECTIVE ON MANAGEMENT

There are three distinct roles that people play in operating a business. They apply to the farm as well as any other business. The three roles are OWNER, MANAGER, and LABORER. Nothing is new or profound about that, except we too often get them confused in the business of running a farm.

Sometimes the three roles are combined in one person, as is usually the case in a small farm operation. That works well, with no conflict between roles, until the business grows and the owner finds that too much time and energy is consumed by his own labor. Then management suffers, and ownership is placed in jeopardy.

The following is an example of a larger beef operation where the laborer actually began to dominate the manager, and both became frustrated and ineffective in their roles.

The wealthy absentee owner hired a competent manager to manage the farm. He was also expected to supply some labor when needed, and was willing to do this, but lacked some of the skills that a good machinery operator needed. The problem developed when the young farmer he hired to do the field work began to do things "his way", and ignored the managers wishes. The young farmer was unusually aggressive, quite competent in handling machinery, and an excellent mechanic, but cared nothing about decision making. He quickly formed a low opinion of the managers ability as a worker, ignoring the management role. The manager was gradually pushed into a submissive position, and management suffered. both roles were loosely defined and even more loosely interpreted. It wasn't long until missunderstanding developed into conflict.

A similar conflict is described in the case of another small but thriving business. The manager, who was also the owner, discovered that some of his employees were making decisions regarding the business without consulting with the owner-manager. Some decisions were good ones, but some were contrary to the owners idea and philosophy of dealing with his customers. He respected his employees, and didn't want to antagonize them, since they were competent in what he had hired them to do. The trouble was, they began making decisions that should have been made by the owner, who usually took his good old time to decide.

And now, what about the owner of the business? The owner may have hired someone to manage, but still tries to run the show. Decisions made by the manager are overruled, and the manager is frustrated. He in turn either takes his frustration out on the workers, or sides with them against the owner. Everyone from the owner on down is unhappy with the results. If the owner wanted to make all the decisions, he should have retained that right, and more specificially defined the roles of his working manager.

Defining the rules of labor-management becomes even more complicated when they are all within the family. Differences in talent and ability should be recognized, so that each member can be assigned the role best suited to them. The one who balances the checkbook should also help decide how money is spent. Too often, the one who spends the money lives in blissful oblivion to the source and supply of income.

The wise business manager will make sure that the decisions are made with the best interest of everyone in the family in mind.

ONE OF THE BIGGEST ISSUES AMERICAN AGRICULTURE FACES IS THE PUBLIC'S PROPER PERCEPTION OF "GOOD OR HARMFUL" FATS & OILS.

HOW WELL INFORMED OR CONFUSED ARE YOU?

1. How important is the influence of fats & oil on health & disease?
2. How valid is the cholesterol theory? Is it a primary or secondary factor in disease?
3. Butter vs oleo; which is better & why? Good & bad cholesterol?
4. Are animal fats as harmful as we are told?
5. Are certain fats helpful in weight control? Saturated vs. polyunsaturated?
6. How important is the omega 3 EFA so much in the news?

ABOUT THE AUTHOR - "FATS & OILS"

Udo Erasmus is an author, researcher and educator, with a commitment to educating the public on issues of health and nutrition. He has a broad range of experience and expertise, both theoretical and practical, in the life sciences. His training includes studies in zoology, medicine, genetics and biochemistry. He is a frequent contributor to alive, the Canadian Journal of Health and Nutrition. Fats and Oils is the result of his extensive research on fats, oils and cholesterol, which included his study with leading European scientists working on the forefront of lipid research techniques.

WHAT DOCTORS ARE SAYING ABOUT HIS BOOK:

"Fats and Oils is the first complete guide to everything you need to know about fats, oils and cholesterol to make the right food choices for your health. Research has clearly established the link between diet and cardiovascular disease, many forms of cancer, diabetes and types of high blood pressure, plus other fatter degenerative diseases. Information that was previously available only in scientific research journals and technical books is made available here. Fats and Oils is your invitation to increased knowledge of this vitally important topic and increased options for health and vigour."

• Jeffrey S. Bland, Ph.D. Fats and Oils is filled with interesting and accurate information concerning both the science and physiology of fatty acids in nutrition and health.

"I have never been so delightfully surprised by a book that should be boring and pedantic. Udo Erasmus has put together all the current information about fats and oils and laid it out for all the world to see."

• Dr. Lendon H. Smith, "The Children's Doctor" and author of best-selling books including Feed Your Kids Right and Dr. Lendon Smith's Low-Stress Diet

"I have gone over Fats and Oils very carefully, and think that Udo Erasmus has done a marvelous job of summarizing almost everything one needs to know about fats and oils."

• Dr. Abran Hoffer, pioneering researcher and editor of Journal of Orthomolecular Psychiatry

Did you know... That doctors have recently found a fatty substance in egg yolks that is highly effective against AIDS?

That cancer-prone lab animals have a 100% higher cancer rate on corn or safflower oil than on lard?

PROGRAM TO REDUCE CHOLESTEROL SOUGHT

Reprinted from The Washington Post, Oct. 5, 1987

BY MICHAEL SPECTER
Of The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A federal health panel, warning that 40 million Americans have cholesterol levels placing them at high risk of heart disease, called on doctors yesterday to prescribe strict diets and, in some cases, drug treatment for those at risk.

The guidelines, aimed at identifying adults who need medical treatment to decrease their cholesterol, establish the first specific recommendations to physicians for treating persons with high cholesterol levels. They also create a single set of blood cholesterol goals for all adults, regardless of age or sex.

"If doctors follow the guidelines, medical practice will undergo a major change as a result of this report," said Dr. DeWitt S. Goodman, professor of medicine at Columbia University and chairman of the federal committee. "It will have a lasting impact on coronary heart disease and public health in the United States."

About 1.5 million Americans suffer heart attacks each year, and 500,000 of them die, according to the National Institutes of Health. Officials said yesterday that strict adherence to the new guidelines could save 300,000 lives annually.

The report urges that all Americans undergo cholesterol testing. Large amounts of cholesterol can lead to heart disease by causing fat to accumulate on artery walls, blocking the vital flow of blood that normally nourishes the heart muscle.

Issued by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, the report states that about 25 percent of Americans between ages 20 and 74 have high blood cholesterol and need treatment.

The panel set a new standard for measuring cholesterol in adults over age 20, after years of guidelines based on age and sex.

The report set three classifications, saying those with total blood cholesterol of 240 milligrams per deciliter of blood or more have "high blood cholesterol," those who measure between 200 and 239 have "borderline high blood cholesterol" and those registering below 200 have "desirable blood cholesterol."

Doctors on the panel stressed that dietary treatment should be the foundation of all therapy to reduce blood cholesterol levels and urged physicians to prescribe drugs only for those with severely elevated cholesterol or those whom diet therapy fails to help.

"There is little instruction about diet therapy in our medical schools," Goodwin said. "Busy doctors prefer using drugs, but nutritional treatment should be used for the vast majority of patients, and drug treatment should be used only when all else fails."

Several drugs on the market are quite effective in lowering cholesterol levels. But, to prove beneficial, drug treatment must last for years, if not for life, the panel noted. Therefore, doctors have urged caution on long term use of new drugs such as lovastatin, for example.

The report called lovastatin, approved for use last month, "a major advance," but doctors on the panel also wrote that "long term safety" has not been established.

The panel cited several risk factors that should be taken into consideration when physicians decide on treatment. Among them are being male, obesity, cigarette smoking, high blood pressure or having a family history of premature heart disease.

The report urges that those with two risk factors have their blood tested to determine more specifically their levels of the type of cholesterol known as low-density lipoprotein, or LDL. High levels of LDL can lead to heart disease by causing fat to attach itself to artery walls.

Another form of cholesterol, called high-density lipoprotein, or HDL, protects against heart disease by removing fat from the arteries.

LDL tests are rarely given, and the new recommendations are expected to increase them. The report said LDL levels of 130 to 159 are classified "borderline high risk cholesterol," while levels of more than 160 are considered "high risk."

Officials said yesterday that the quality of cholesterol tests given nationwide could vary greatly between laboratories.

"We need to present a standard that labs can use to measure cholesterol," said Herbert K. Naito, a member of the panel who studied testing standards. "Huge screening programs will call upon us to present more accurate test results."

He said that, for now, people should have two tests, separated by about a month. If the results vary by more than 5 percent, a third should be taken and the results averaged, he said.

The panel said doctors should prescribe diet therapy in two stages. In the first, the patient should consume no more than 30 percent of his or her total calories in fat, with no more than 10 percent of them in saturated fat and fewer than 300 milligrams a day in dietary cholesterol.

The second phase would require a greater reduction in saturated fats and cholesterol.

Dairy Management Conference To Be Held

BY LISA HAMM

STATE COLLEGE - Dairy farmers and related agri-businessmen are invited to attend a dairy management conference here on November 16-17. The conference will be conducted by the Department of Dairy and Animal Science and the Pennsylvania Cooperative Extension Service. It will be held at the Sheraton Penn State.

Topics at the meeting will range from dairy nutrition and forage crop economics to effective management of farm employees. Dr. Terry Smith of Cornell and Russ Farrow of Farm Credit Service will be among the featured speakers.

On Monday, the conference will begin with registration at 11:30 a.m. with a 15-minute introduction and welcome slated for 1:00. Larry Muller will kick things off with an overview of the areas to reduce costs or increase profits. Later, a discussion will center on assessing the costs and benefits of dairy feeding programs. At 3:15 p.m., following a break, attendees will choose to sit in on one of three classes: the future of computerized dairy management, considerations for effective health and reproductive management, and sire selection for profit. These classes will repeat one hour later.

Monday will be brought to a close with a dinner banquet where Lou Moore will present "Crystal Ball Gazing and Other Witchcraft".

Tuesday includes seminars on forage crop economics at 8:15 and three concurrent sessions at 9:00 and 10:15: personnel management of farm employees, tools for financial management, and maximizing luxury culling. At 11:00, Dr. Terry Smith will discuss taking control of one's farm business and identifying strengths and weaknesses. The two-day session will adjourn at noon on Tuesday.

Registration is $30 for one and $25 for an accompanying spouse. The fee includes the evening banquet, milk/coffee breaks, and printed materials. For a registration form contact Dairy Management Conference, Room 8, Borland Laboratory, Pennsylvania State University, University Park, PA 16802. Conference officials ask that the registration be sent in by November 6.

was begun in June, 1985 and completed in June, 1987. The mill and silos are of slip-form construction. In addition to the main mill building, auxiliary buildings include 4 silos, capable of storing 14,000 bushels of corn and 240 tons of soybean meal; a warehouse, rail receiving shed, truck receiving shed and a conference room.

As many as 60 trucks per day and 15 railroad cars per week unload raw materials at the Mount Joy site. Currently the railroad receiving area can accomodate 5 railroad cars. Over 30,000 bushels of corn are unloaded weekly and 150 tons of soybean meal arrive each day.

Pennfield manufactures the bulk of the poultry feed at their mill in the Hempfield Industrial Park, Lancaster. In addition to Pennfield Feeds, the company owns and operates Pennfield Farms Egg Division, Ephrata; Pennfield Farms Poultry Meat Division, Fredericksburg; and Beachley-Hardy Seed Company, Camp Hill. Approximately 850 people are employed company-wide, and annual sales are in excess of $160 million.

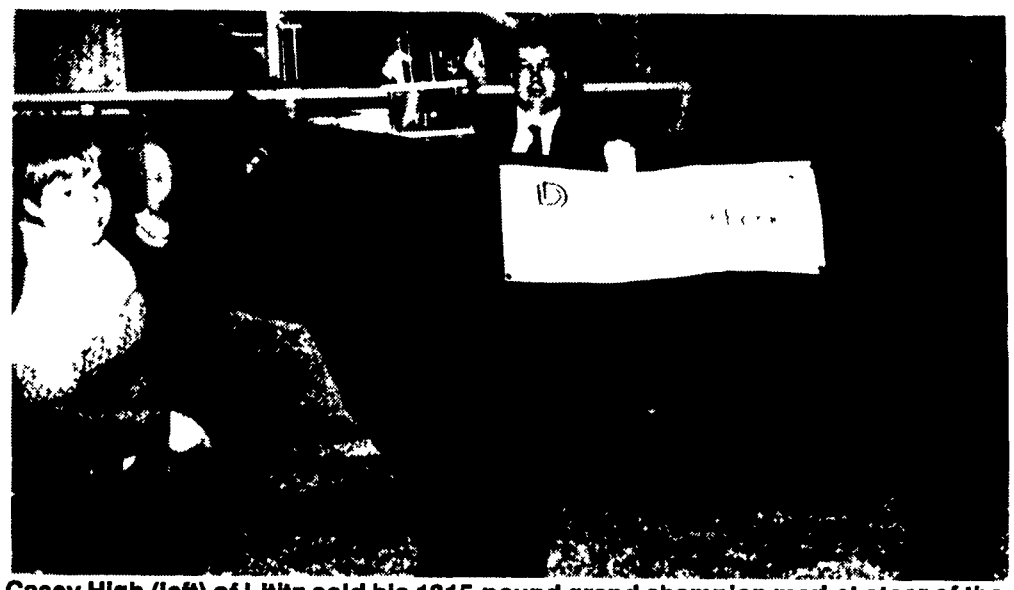
on 113,040 pounds (on a grain equivalent basis), for instance, can buy up to 176,625 pounds of alfalfa hay (because alfalfa has a fraction of the feed value of grain) at $120 a ton and receive $5,299 (half of the $10,597 price tag). Or he could buy 491,000 pounds of corn silage (because that has an even lower grain equivalent) at $25 a ton and receive $3,071, half of the $6,142 price tag. However, the government will pay no more than five cents a pound ($5,652 in the example) on a grain equivalent basis, a limit that would apply only to the most expensive feedstuffs.

The payments are made in so-called PIK certificates, which can be redeemed for grain stocks under government loan or sold on the open market, often at rates slightly higher than their face value. The certificates have an eight-month lifetime beyond the month in which they're issued.

As in most government programs, those with experience of this one say farmers vary significantly in the extent to which they benefit, depending on individual circumstances. Eyler, for one, noted the advantage of signing up as soon as possible because feed needs are calculated from the date of enrollment. Others noted that livestock farmers who typically grow more feed than they need and sell the excess as a cash crop may not qualify for assistance because all crops grown this year count in the feed-on-hand determination.

Nevertheless, the program likely will be used widely in many areas where the drought was severe this year. In Pennsylvania last year, 113 farmers received $394,000 toward the purchase of 12.1 million pounds of feed, Pennay said. That total should increase this year.



Casey High (left) of Lititz sold his 1315-pound grand champion market steer of the New Holland Fair to Dauphin Deposit Bank. John Risser (center), Agri-business officer, handled the bidding.

Bed and Breakfast Offers "Turn-of-the-Century Charm"

BY CAROLYN HILSDON GILLES
Crawford Co.Correspondent

MERCER — A billboard along I-80 beckons travelers to stay at The Magoffin Guest House Bed and Breakfast as they pass through Mercer county. This uncharacteristic method of advertising may disturb some bed and breakfast purists and cause them to wonder if this grand scale of advertising could be for an authentic bed and breakfast establishment. But rest assured, The Magoffin Guest House Bed and Breakfast is indeed authentic albeit unique.

The Magoffin Guest House was originally built by Doctor Magoffin and was occupied by his family for over half a century. Janet and Rodney McClelland fell in love with this large Queen Ann Victorian house when they first saw it in 1983. At that time, it had been subdivided into apartments. But the McClelland's are people of vision. In 1985, they looked at it again with an eye to turning it into a bed and breakfast establishment. They bought it in July of that year and The Magoffin Guest House opened for Thanksgiving to a full house.

But between July and November, much had to be accomplished. Prior to the purchase, Janet and Rod had done a lot of reading about bed and breakfast businesses and made a family trip to Florida, staying in bed and breakfasts along the way. They purposely took their children along to see how feasible it was for whole families to stay in bed and breakfast houses.

The trip taught them a lot and excited them about the possibilities that lay dormant in the Victorian brick house in Mercer. When the McClellands returned, they consulted with contractor Don Blank about the physical reconstruction needed to convert the house from apartments to separate rooms. Blank became so excited about the project that he became a third owner. Enthusiastically they scraped off paint to restore the house's original brass fixtures and preserve the original shutters and woodwork.

The unique idea to furnish the rooms with antiques that belonged to other people came from the reading the McClellands had done. They further researched the idea by visiting this kind of a bed and breakfast during their Florida excursion.

But using their antiques and furnishings was not an easy concept to sell to local antique dealers. The convincing factor was that it does provide a nice showroom to display large items like beds and dressers that do not show up well in crowded antique shops. The McClellands now have five dealers and collectors represented with furnishings that are for sale. Small notebooks in each room contain information about and the prices of the antiques used. A similar notebook is in the parlor for the furniture in the common use areas. Also in the parlor is an album featuring the antiques in the bedrooms. Interested buyers can then arrange a closer look when the rooms are unoccupied.

In addition, Janet operates a "Spare Room Gift Shop" with antiques and samplings from points of local interest. The shop displays the work of local craft persons, including that of the Old Order Amish who live nearby.

Unlike many bed and breakfast operators, the McClellands do not live on the premises. They originally gave this some consideration, but decided that the needs of their young family might conflict with those of their guests. They do, however, live nearby which makes it possible for Janet to be on hand in the evenings to welcome guests as they arrive, leave an evening snack and then be back bright and early, from 7-9 a.m., to serve breakfast.

The Magoffin Guest House also serves lunch on Monday - Saturday from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. and dinner parties for 10-24 by reservation. However, this is operated as a separate business by Janet's sister-in-law Jacque McClelland who leases the Magoffin Guest House facilities and has her own staff of five. Jacque's luncheon menu includes a hot entree of the day, two homemade soups, home baked breads and pies and Banbury Tart, golden raisins and walnuts in a rich pastry crust. An unusual offering is The Magoffin Salad where the diner is given a list of ingredients to select from. The choice of the type of greens, three vegetables and two proteins from those listed provides the opportunity to create hearty salad combinations to suit individual tastes.

The two businesses have meshed together nicely. Janet doesn't have to be more busy and tied down than she desires and still The Magoffin Guest House can handle showers, rehersal dinners, and weddings in the parlor with the reception following.

But even with Jacque handling the lunch and dinner trade, running a bed and breakfast establishment is not a 9-5 job. Janet is on hand from 7-9 to do breakfast. Then, after checkout at 11 a.m., she has a housekeeper come to help her get the rooms cleaned and ready for occupancy again.

The Magoffin Guest House has six bedrooms, all but two of these with private baths. Each bedroom can sleep two, with more sleeping accomodations possible by the addition of rollaways and porta cribs. One room even boasts an auxiliary Murphy Bed that can be dropped into place beside the double bed.

The bedroom on the downstairs level was once the doctor's office and is decorated with antique medicine bottles and mortar and pestle. Although most of the decor of the house is Victorian, a suite in Amish style utilizes what were once the servants quarters. In these three rooms, the ceiling is lower and the trim plainer with a rear wall of exposed brick, stenciling on the painted walls and Amish style furniture.

Janet enjoys what she calls "the special breed of people" who come to enjoy the house and the antiques. And it is her great delight to share the reactions of guests who see the house for the first time and try out the pump organ and the antique victrola and the stereoscope that are available in the parlor for guests to use.

Bed and Breakfast

Grove City and Westminster Colleges and only five minutes from I-79 and I-80, The Magoffin Guest House is an ideal place to house visiting parents of college students. Janet made contacts with the admissions and alumni offices of the area colleges and took an album with pictures of the bedrooms. The Magoffin Guest House is now recommended by the colleges for housing on parents weekends.

In addition to the billboard on the highway attracting business, guests sometimes arrive as overflow from area motels. Although Janet is the first to admit that they are for everyone, staying at The Magoffin Guest House has converted many travelers to the jobs of bed and breakfast.

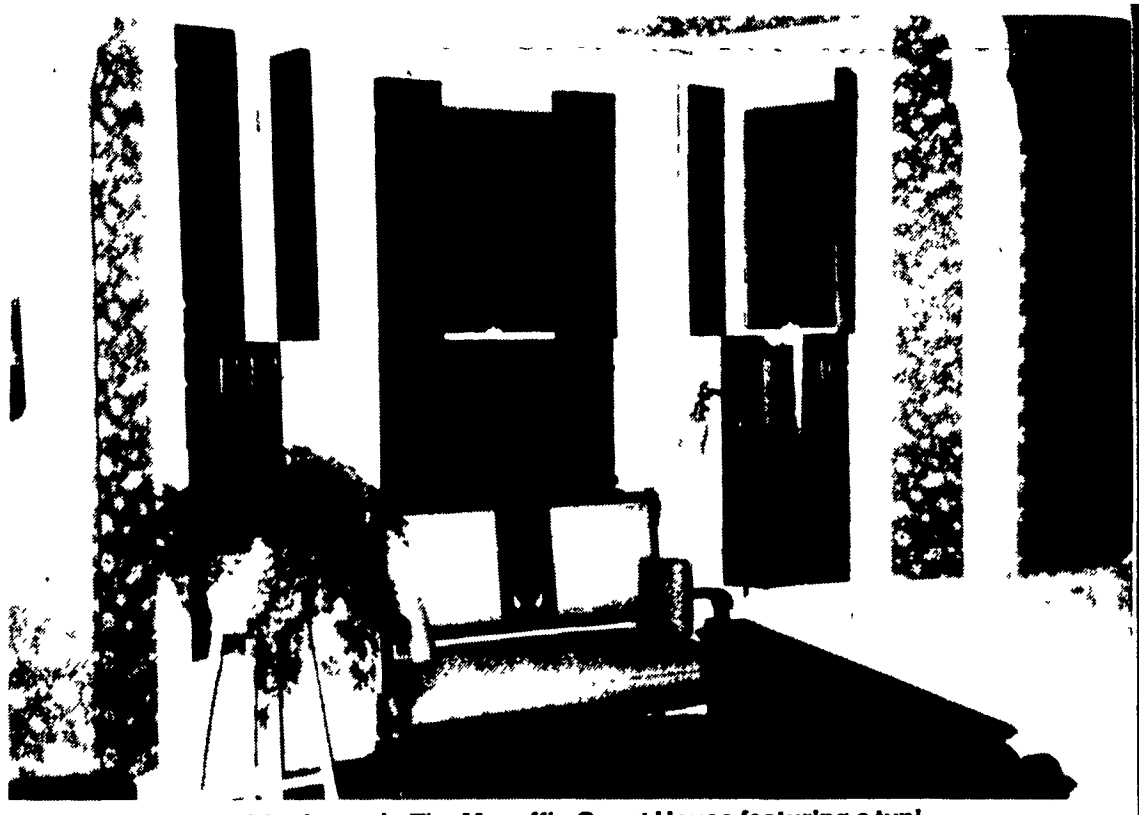
Many guests use The Magoffin Guest House as a base for antiquing in the area. They get a certain amount of repeat business from business people, and visiting executives of local industries.

They are also listed with Pittburgh Bed and Breakfast, a reservation service, and in publications like Bed and Breakfast USA, the PA edition of Highways and Byways, and a free publication of the state travel bureau. A listing that they are particularly proud of is a booklet called "America's Wonderful Little Inn, and Guest Hosts" that is available only on the recommendation of a guest. Information or reservation can be obtained by writing to The Magoffin Guest House, 129 South Pitt Street, Mercer, PA 16137 or by calling 412-662-4611.

Running a bed and breakfast is a real family affair. They all have to help to make it possible. Janet handles the managerial affairs of the house, but Rod also helps to greet guests as they arrive, making sure they know where their room is and what is available to them in the house. Daughters Beth, a sophomore in high school, and Laura, a freshman at Penn State, have helped with waitressing. Even 10-year-old Sam has helped to serve breakfast.

Janet's breakfasts usually consist of fruit and rolls and/or muffins. Cereal is also available. A specialty of the house is the cinnamon nut roll made with Ron's grandmother's recipe. After bringing fruit to the table, Janet is on hand to see that guests are taken care of and to circulate her guest book which boasts signatures of visitors from far-off lands such as the Netherlands, Germany and France. Famous visitors have included Chris Eversol, star of the T.V. Show "The Cavanaughs," the road company of CATS and a man who was in town to pull horses' teeth.

Janet feels that the real fun of bed and breakfast places is their individual character. And it is its unique character that makes The Magoffin Guest House an excellent stop-over for anyone attracted by the charm of the "Turn-of the Century."



A bedroom in The Magoffin Guest House featuring a typical high headboard Victorian bed and marble top table. The bed is walnut with burl walnut trim ($428); the Victorian marble top table has incised carving and burl walnut trim ($520).

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

We buried Grandma today.

But, the hollow spot in a lot of hearts is cushioned with an abundance of treasured memories.

For more than twenty years she was Grandma to me, even though the privilege of calling her that came as a marriage bonus. Lots of people, though, called her that; in fact, there are probably a host of youngsters grew up not knowing her first name was anything but "Grandma."

She wore the title well, an ideal embodiment of what many of us probably envision with great affection by the term "Grandma." The farmer still recalls sneaking to her cookie jar when he could barely walk to filch goodies kept there for such purposes.

We shared the tie of being dairy farm women, though their herd sold just a few years after ours came to be, only a meadow and a ridge apart. It was there that the farmer learned many of the basics of dairying and related crop and machinery chores. Along with filching, no doubt, more cookies. And adding an occasional hair-raising equipment close call to the family history. Even in recent years, she kept in farm wife practice occasionally when our heifers got out in her back yard. None of it ever bothered Grandma, or at least not that she ever let it show.

I remained in awe of her patience and endless good-humored outlook. Never do I recall hearing her raising her voice, an enviable accomplishment to those of us less blessed with persevering patience.

Still, though soft-spoken, she had plenty of "spunk" and fiercely treasured her independence. In spite of some physical infirmities, including a major joint replacement when she was past 80, and to the frequent concern of the family, Grandma persisted in tending her beloved flowers. Our youngsters often stopped in for a quick visit with her and Grandpa as they checked out the fields and the cattle, which cover the distance between our homes. More than once, they came home giggling because Grandma was wiping out weeds from her hillside flower bed, aided by her cane and her indomitable spirit.

Grandma loved nothing better than to have her family - nine children (including two sets of twins), forty-plus grandchildren, more than fifty great-grandchildren and a great, great grandson - get together. It was easy to tell when Grandma's clan was about to gather. She'd have "at work" a huge crock of homemade root beer, readying to a perfect state of delicious, sweet carbonation. Grandma's Root Beer was the fuel on which the family gatherings ran.

Certain bits of her good-humored wisdom have become particularly priceless to me. Her commentary on dirt has forever etched my outlook on the endless tracking of farm residues with which both her house and mine have been blessed in their own times.

"Why, it's just soil; that's what we make our living from," Grandma would chuckle, quoting the wise advice once shared with her by yet another dairy farm woman. Though holding fast to her firm moral convictions, Grandma quickly embraced modern technological progress. Life in the past was not something that she dwelt on with great sentiment.

"Don't tell me about the 'good old days'," she once confided. "I've been there." Her vivid recollections of heating and lugging washday water for a large family of little children, and of smoking and canning large amounts of meats, gave Grandma genuine appreciation of our miraculous and diverse modern electrical applications of heat and cold.

And, most of all, she shared a host of little parts of herself that are indelible to our own everyday life. Jars of "Grandma's pickles," from her favorite shared recipe, and applebutter made from her short-cut, no-fuss directions wait on our basement storage shelves. Materials she passed on while we taught a Sunday School class together for many years are scattered through my books.

And I've lost track of the number of plants now here, but originally blessed by Grandma's capable green thumb. Cuttings she encouraged me to take last year before frost have grown into huge mounds of color in the border. And various houseplants, which once wintered in her pantry, live on in our little greenhouse.

We buried Grandma today. One of the younger great-grandchildren figured it out best in a little prayer she offered at her family's dinner table: "Dear God, I hope Grandma's having fun in Heaven, and not worrying too much about us missing her here."

Grandma, no doubt, completely understood the message.

Teenage Connection Workshop

CREAMERY — Do you connect with teens? Or are your techniques obsolete? How can you learn to reach out and relate to teenagers? A one-day workshop in which participants will gain a better understanding of adolescents today and how to better relate to them will be offered on Saturday, November 14, from 9:00 AM to 4:00 PM, at the Montgomery County 4-H Center, in Creamery. The program is designed for adults who work with teens. It is especially appropriate for adults in leadership positions varying from club leaders to child care workers to therapists.

Workshop participants will improve their communication skills and learn how to apply their improved skills to real life situations with teens. They will also gain awareness of and appreciation for their own leadership style and how it impacts on others. Participants will also discuss current problem situations involving teens and learn creative new ways to approach them. Registrants will also participate in Round-table lunch discussions on teen sexuality, teen suicide, child abuse and career counseling.

Sponsored by the Montgomery County 4-H Leadership Development Committee, the workshop features a variety of speakers. Alix Amar Stritzinger, M.Ed., M.S.S., has led groups on topics including women and self-esteem, teen leadership and communication skills. A counselor in private practice, she works with individuals, families and groups in both Center City and Chalfont. A former 4-H member and leader, she is co-director of volunteers at the Wissahickon Hospice and teaches courses in assertiveness and stress management at Gwynedd Mercy College.

Lois Showalter, B.A., has expensive experience in the mental health field. She is an Associate Psychodramatist and presently a member of an on-going psychodrama training group. She is currently working at Montgomery County Emergency Service as a social worker and has also worked with teenagers in group homes.

One-half credit in Continuing Education from Penn State University will be offered to those who attend the entire workshop. A $15.00 registration fee includes luncheon and materials. All participants must pre-register, by November 5, 1987. For a brochure or to register for the workshop, call Helaine Brown, 4-H Agent, at 489-4315, 9:00 AM to 4:30 PM.

Mozzarella, Scamorze and Provolone cheeses are called "pasta filata," meaning stretchy curd. During production, the curd is cooked in hot water until it becomes an elastic mass, then is pulled and molded while hot into various shapes.

Celebrate National Pork Month With New Pork Classics

As the nation celebrates Pork Month in October with Pork Fest activities, its a good time to take a new look at this familiar meat. Did you know that today's pork is almost 50 percent leaner than the pork of 20 years ago?

And the Pork Industry, working with government and university researchers, have identified a method for testing for trichinae in hogs. The USDA approved test assures us that the pork from tested hogs is safe. To the home chef, that means that no longer do we need to overcook pork "just to be safe," since over-cooking produces leathery, dried-out meat.

Now, pork should be cooked medium-done so that you can eat a succulent pork roast, dripping with juices. Wholesome, nutritious, medium-done pork provides us with nutrients and flavor that we'll want to try often.

PORK A LA KING

2 cups roast pork, cubed
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
3 tablespoons green pepper, diced
1 3-ounce jar button mushrooms, drained

1 cup frozen peas, thawed
¼ teaspoon thyme, crushed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Toast, biscuits, corn bread or waffles, optional

In large heavy saucepan, melt butter, blend in flour, whisk in milk and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Stir in vegetables and seasonings; gently stir in pork and warm throughly, stirring gently. Serve over toast, if desired. Serves 4.

2 ounces Swiss cheese, cut into 2"x¼" rectangles
1 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
½ cup flour
1 egg, beaten with 1 teaspoon water

Slice each chop lengthwise almost in half to butterfly. Between two pieces of plastic film, pound each butterflied chop to ¼" thickness. On half of each chop, place 1 ounce proscuitto and 1 piece of cheese. Sprinkle with ¼ teaspoon thyme. Roll chops to enclose filling. Coat with flour, dip into egg wash, and roll in bread crumbs.

In 12" frying pan, melt 3 tablespoons butter. Add pork and cook 10-12 minutes, turning frequently to brown all sides.

Garnish with lemon wedges and parsley.

National Pork Producers Council

ALOHA HAM LOAVES

2 pounds ground smoked ham
6 slices canned pineapple
6½-inch squares pimiento
1 can (5⅓ ounces) evaporated milk
½ teaspoon curry powder
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
1 egg, beaten
½ cup crushed unsalted crackers
2 tablespoons catsup
1 tablespoon snipped parsley

Place a pineapple slice in the bottom of each of 6 aluminum tart pans. Fill center of each pineapple slice with a square of pimiento. Mix 2 tablespoons evaporated milk with curry powder and sprinkle 1 teaspoon of the liquid over each pineapple slice. Add remaining evaporated milk to instant onion. Lightly but thoroughly combine ground ham, egg, cracker crumbs, catsup and parsley; mix in evaporated milk with onion. Divide meat mixture in sixths and place 1 portion on pineapple ring in each pan, pressing lightly to mound. Cover each pan tightly with aluminum foil, securing around rim of pan. Place on grill and cook at low to moderate temperature 45-55 minutes or until done. Invert pans to remove loaves and serve pineapple side up. Serves 6.

Pork roast, the classic white meat, has taken on a new face in the last year. Recent technology has greatly reduced pork's fat content making it a real plus for calorie conscious people.

The tangy aroma of barbeque pork floated across the Manheim Community Farm Show on Monday night. It was the PA Pork Cookout King Contest where Ron Wilson, Harrisburg, stole the chef's hat and apron with his country style pork ribs basted with his original Lancaster barbeque sauce.

For more about the contest and our new PA Pork Cookout King, look for the story in this section.

If you are looking for a recipe but can't seem to find it anywhere, send your recipe request to Cook's Question Corner, care of Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 366, Lititz, PA 17543. There's no need to send a SASE. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible.

Editors Note: Popsicle® is a registered trademark and was used in the plural and without the appropriate trademark notation in one of our recipes recently. We regret the inadvertent improper use of this trademark.

Thanks to readers who help make this column a success by sending in answers and questions. Do not feel offended if your recipe is not printed because many times I receive numerous answers and cannot use them all. Please do not let this discourage you because some questions go unanswered for weeks. Your recipes are needed!

QUESTION - Mrs. Fannie Lapp, Myerstown, requests a recipe for cream cheese that tastes like Philadelphia Cream Cheese.

QUESTION - Esther Long, Lenhartsville, would like a bread recipe for barley bread that does not use wheat flour. Since she has a granddaughter who is allergic to wheat flour, this 72-year-old grandmother said she needs to learn to bake many things differently than before. She also would appreciate recipes for pot-pie or chocolate cake that does not use wheat flour.

QUESTION - Rachel Beiler, New Providence, requests a recipe for granola bars which taste like store-brought ones.

QUESTION - Mrs. Donald Rudolph, New Oxford, asks, "Does anyone know where to get wheat cereal like Flory's Mill in Rohrerstown sold?" She said the mill is now occupied by other craftpersons.

QUESTION - A loyal Chadds Ford reader requests the recipe for canned apple pie filling that had appeared in Lancaster Farming within the past two years. She used it, liked it and misplaced it.

QUESTION - Mrs. Glenn Martin, Ephrata, would like instructions on canning casseroles, stews, and soups in a water bath canner or in the oven. She does not have a pressure cooker and wonders if jars MUST be pressure cooked to remain sealed? Also, she would like to know how long ingredients like pasta and vegetables need to be precooked before canning.

QUESTION - Dorthy Renninger, Culpeper, Va., would like a recipe for tomato preserves that is very light in color and can be used for pies.

QUESTION - Mrs. L. Reiff, Lititz, requests a recipe for chocolate shoo-fly pie.

ANSWER - Linda M. Marks and many other readers have requested diabetic recipes. The response to this question has been overwhelming. Look for the recipes in both the October 17 and the October 31 issue in the Home on the Range column. Since the Pork Cookout King Contest was held in Manheim this week, we are featuring pork this week. Please do not mail additional diabetic recipes since I already have received enough to publish a book of them.

QUESTION - Mrs. Cyril Cassner, Newburg, requests a recipe for seafood salad that tastes like that served at Caesar's Palace in Atlantic City, N.J.

QUESTION - Grace Ikeler, Bloomsburg, would like to know how to make pectin for jelly. She believes it is made from apples.

Corn, cut from 5 ears of sweet corn
3 quarts boiling water
1½ teaspoons of salt
2 teaspoons sugar.

Boil corn with salt and sugar for 3 minutes. Add ½ cup white flour paste to make gravy. Boil mixture for 10 minutes or until thick and it loses its raw taste, stirring often. Pour mixture into pan or dish large enough to hold the mush. Place in refrigerator until cold. Slice and fry like regular corn mush.

Join 4-H Now

CREAMERY — This week, October 4-10, is National 4-H Week, but 4-H is an all-year program of teaching, learning, caring, planning and organizing - all a never ending process. Four-H is the youth education program of The Pennsylvania State University, serving youth ages eight through nineteen. It is based in the College of Agriculture and supervised from the University Park Campus.

4-H has something for everyone. From raising steers in rural areas to gardens in the cities, from rocketry, clothing and textiles, foods and nutrition, to leadership training and communications skills, 4-H provides educational opportunities to youth all over the country. In Montgomery County some of the most popular projects are foods and nutrition, clothing and textiles, horsemanship, rabbits and cavies, and self-improvement, a program in which youth learn about wardrobe planning, grooming and how to "present the best you."

Volunteers are the backbone of the 4-H Program and are always needed. They share their knowledge and skills with young people in 4-H clubs, planning and organizing programs which teach life skills to youth. Other volunteers serve on committees, serving as communication links between the community and the Cooperative Extension Service, of which 4-H is a part.

4-H has over 107,000 members in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, with over 20,000 adult and teen volunteer leaders. About 33,000 4-H'ers live in small towns and open country, but not on farms. About 9500 do live on Pennsylvania farms. Another 5500 live in cities, 12,000 in suburbs and 13,500 live in large towns that are not cities.

For more information on how you can get involved in 4-H as a leader or member, call your 4-H Agent at your county's extension office.

Kid's Korner

Country Kids Enjoy Working

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LITITZ — Chad Miller brushed clumps of dirt off his sneakers as he said, "It's a lot of hard work raising gourds. A lot of people don't know that."

His seven-year-old sister Anita nodded her head in agreement. "When it doesn't rain, the gourds must be watered everyday."

"We have 500 plants," Chad explained. "When it's dry, I carry buckets of water to the field and when I walk through the patch my legs get itchy because the leaves are really prickly."

Chad and Anita have two younger sisters, Katy, 3, and Roselyn, 11 months.

Three-year-old Katy chimed, "I work too. I take care of the kitties."

"We have lots of work to do," Chad said. "We help our parents pick flowers." The children's parents grow five acres of flowers to make into pretty arrangements to sell.

Anita usually likes picking bunches of flowers, but she said, "I don't like picking globes because you must pick so many and you must count them. If I lose count I need to start all over again." She counts 25 of them for a bunch. Then she and her brother put rubberbands around each bunch.

Fourth-grader Chad said he likes picking cattails, but best of all he likes driving tractor around the field while his dad sprays the flowers.

"Some children play when they get home from school," Chad said, "but we get right to work."

"But," Anita reminded him, "They don't earn money either. I'd rather help work and get paid than not work and not get paid."

Chad agreed. "We save our money, give some to church and spend some of it. I want to buy a 4-wheeler," Chad said, "then I can get a plow and stuff for it and help in the flower fields."

When he grows up, Chad wants to be a farmer and probably raise flowers. Anita wants to be a teacher.

What does Katy want to do? "I want to grow so I can work more," she said.

These country children believe working can be fun.

The children have acres of flowers to pick. They count them and rubberband them in bunches of 25.

Woolie Promoters Flock To Manheim Fair

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

MANHEIM — At a fair it is usually the animal that is washed, brushed and polished until it shines. In an unusual twist, the Shepherd's Lead Line competition features the leadsman, also washed, brushed and polished, but dressed fashionably in wool garments.

Sarah Fleener, one of the coordinators of the event held Monday at the Manheim Fair, explains that the purpose of the competition is to promote the sheep and wool industry. So it is the person who gets 60 points in the competition, and the animal which gets 40 points.

Of course, just any pretty face cannot win the competition, because the contestants also must be able to handle their beautifully groomed sheep as well as model an outfit which features at least 70 percent wool in its dominant piece.

Mrs. Fleener says, "We want to promote the product on the sheep and show what can be done with wool. It gives an elegant touch to the sheep and wool industry."

Although the Manheim show is just four years old, Mrs. Fleener notes that the Lead Line competition has been around for many years at the larger shows like the Keystone International.

It is becoming easier for the contestants to find wool garments, according to Mrs. Fleener, who notes, "There seems to be a bigger emphasis on wool. From what I see in the stores, wool is coming back."

A big enthusiast for wool, Mrs. Fleener helped to educate the audience at Manheim by pointing out the virtues of wool, including warmth, which was important on the cold October night of the contest. She told the onlookers, "If wool is cared for properly over the summer, and protected from moths, it will be long-lasting." She noted that wool maintains its bright colors over the years. One little known fact is wool's natural fire resistance which is one reason wool blankets are popular in places like Army barracks and college dormitories.

Mrs. Fleener expressed appreciation for the large group of participants at Manheim, including a group of boys who for the first time competed in their own class.

In addition to the fit and appropriateness of the outfit, contestants were judged on their ability to lead their sheep and their poise throughout the contest.

At Manheim, 16-year-old Carey Donches, R.D. 2, Manheim, took first place in the senior division with a classically styled wool outfit. She modeled a grey flannel blazer, black pleated slacks and a red buffalo plaid scarf, all of which were 100 percent wool. A casual 100 percent wool beret completed her attractive outfit, and she had chosen to highlight her yearling ewe with a matching buffalo plaid scarf. A senior at Manheim Central High School, Carey is also president of the Lancaster County 4-H Woolies Club.

First in the junior division was 14-year-old Diane Musser, Elizabethtown R.D. 2. Diane wore a 100 percent royal blue wool sweater with a matching 100 percent wool beret. A gray skirt was also made of pure wool. Her sheep wore similar complimentary wool. A freshman at Elizabethtown High School, Diane is secretary of the Woolies Club and is also in the 4-H Beef Club and the Elizabethtown Pig Club.

Taking first place in the "boys only" class was 11-year-old Wendall Mark Landis, R.D. 7, Manheim. Wendall wore a purple heather 100 percent Shetland wool sweater, a 100 percent virgin wool black tie and a gray hat of 100 percent wool, which matched his gray slacks. To keep his feet warm, and to keep the spirit of the competition, Wendall also wore 60 percent wool socks. His ewe lamb wore a coordinated 100 percent lamb's wool plaid scarf in purple and gray which enhanced Wendall's outfit.

Winners in the Shepherd's Lead Line Competition held Monday night at the Manheim Fair included, from left: Senior Division, Carey Donches; Junior Division, Diane Musser; and Boys Division, Wendall Landis. All contestants modeled outfits which featured garments with at least 75 percent wool, and showed their sheep which wore some coordinated wool.

Wendall is a sixth grader at Locust Grove Mennonite School, and is a member of the Woolies Club. Last year he received an award for keeping the best record book in the club.

Other senior division winners were: 2. Tricia Musser, Elizabethtown; 3. Jane Endslow, Marietta; 4. Jennifer Wenger, Akron; 5. Gina Montes, Lititz; 6. Tracy Montes, Lititz.

In the junior division other winners were: 2. Arlissa Snavely, Landisville; 3. Andrea Mylin, Manheim; 4. Lisa Reiff, Strasburg; 5. Joelle Boll, Mount Joy; 6. Lori Boll, Mount Joy.

In boys competition, other winners were: 2. Lyndon Reiff, Strasburg; 3. Jonathon Hess, Lancaster; 4. Konrad Hess, Lancaster.

Have You Heard?

Baby Bottle Tooth Decay

Are you one of the many parents who soothe your cranky or crying baby with a bottle of milk, formula, or juice during naps or evening bedtime? If so, you could be harming your child's teeth. If you must put your baby to bed with a bottle, fill it only with water.

This advice appears in "Prevent Baby Bottle Tooth Decay," a new fact sheet published by the National Institute of Dental Research. Prolonged bottle feeding of babies with sugary liquids can lead to baby bottle tooth decay, a severe form of dental decay and a leading oral health problem among children under three years of age.

When an infant sucks on a bottle during the day, saliva helps wash away sugars and acids that can cause tooth decay. During sleep, however, saliva flow is reduced. If your child falls asleep with a bottle, sugary liquids may not be swallowed quickly. They may drip continuously and remain in the mouth for hours. Bacteria naturally present in the mouth convert the sugars in these drinks to acids that can decay teeth. The longer baby bottle nursing with sweet liquids continues, the greater the damage.

Your child's baby teeth are important for proper chewing and nutrition, clear speech, and good appearance. But they also are highly susceptible to decay. Baby bottle tooth decay can occur rapidly, involve many teeth, and cause severe pain. Upper front teeth are most likely to be damaged, although others may be affected as well. When baby teeth are lost too early, permanent teeth may grow in crooked or crowded.

Buying Pumpkins

Have you ever tried to make a pumpkin pie from a pumpkin intended to be used as a Jack-O-Lantern? It's not easy is it? That's because there are two types of pumpkins and most people cannot tell the difference. The first, called a field pumpkin, is usually at least 12 inches in diameter and it has a ridged angular stem. If you were to cut across the stem it would be star shaped. These are the best choices for decorating.

When you are picking a pumpkin for Halloween pick one that is fairly light in weight for its size... it will have less meat and will be easier to cut. There is also more room inside for a candle.

No matter what size pumpkin you choose, pick one that is flattened on the ends, that way it will not have a tendency to tip over. This is especially important if you intend to put a candle in it.

Some other pumpkin choosing tips include selecting one with the stem still attached. It will be less mature and will hold up better if you are buying early. Store it below room temperature and above 40 degrees. Both chilling and high temperatures cause it to spoil quickly.

Now for you bakers... a sugar or pie pumpkin is usually smaller than a field pumpkin and the color is usually a much darker orange. It has a very dense flesh that would make carving it a chore and once you have opened it up you will see that the flesh is also darker with a finer texture.

When your pie is complete... do not be surprised if the end result does not look as firm as a pie from a canned pumpkin pie mix. Commercial pie mix is usually combination of one-third pumpkin to two-thirds squash. The manufacturers add squash to give more body to the product.

Leaf Raking Pays Off

A necessary investment for the home gardener interested in maintaining a lush lawn is some muscle power behind a rake. The season of raking the fallen leaves is now upon us and raking the leaves several times during the fall and early winter will help to prevent serious injury to your lawn.

Established as well as newly seeded lawns need leaf removal if you want to avoid damage to the lawn grasses. Susan Goldsworthy, Delaware County Cooperative Extension Horticulturalist says it may seem like a futile job to start raking leaves while there are so many still clinging to the trees, but putting it off until the last leaf falls certainly is not the best way to care for your lawn.

Leaves left on the lawn will smother the grass quickly. The danger of smothering is compounded when showers wet the leaves and forms a tight mat of them. It is especially important to rake these wet leaves, although they are more difficult to rake.

Don't allow leaves to remain on the lawn because of their fertilizing value. Their presence will cause more damage to the lawn grasses than the benefit, if any, as fertilizer. The best way to dispose of leaves is to put them into a compost pile. Such compost piles later provide a good source of free organic material.

Little Valley Farm Blooms Profits

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LITITZ — Four years ago when avian flu wiped out John Miller's 10,000 chickens, he was hesitant to risk repopulating his poultry operation. To continue supporting his family on their 60-acre farm, John needed a new income-producing product.

As he contemplated various job opportunities, Linda, his wife, envisioned launching their own dried flower business on their Little Valley Farm in Lititz. John was not convinced. Drying flowers seemed like a far-out business venture to him.

Linda persisted. Dubiously, John planted an acre of flowers like statice and globe amarantha. "We rented outside space at Root's Country Market in Manheim," Linda recalled. "And," she paused as she exchanged a laughing glance with her husband, "we'll never forget that first day. All morning, we sat in the house and watched it rain. But in the afternoon the sky cleared. For awhile, we debated whether or not we should bother to go, but finally we packed up the flower arrangements and went to the market."

John said, "Within four hours, everything was sold! That first day at Root's convinced me that Linda was right. We should go into the dried flower business."

The booming success of their business continued, but not without hard work, long hours and planning. Through trial and error the Millers learned the maturity flowers need to be picked for drying. They dry all their flowers by hanging them upside down in a dark, dry area. John emphasized, "They must be kept dry because mold changes the color."

Weekly, for 1½ years, the Millers continued to take their product to Roots. They moved from an outside stand to an inside one. By then, the Millers had branched out into other methods of selling both retail and wholesale. Linda said, "We soon learned the dried flowers sell even better at arts and craft shows." So they dropped their weekly excursions to Root's Market and concentrated on choosing shows that produced the most profit.

"Every year," Linda said, "The shows get better and better." She added, "We prefer to enter juried shows that require slides and pictures to screen registrants." Those shows produce more buyers.

This year the Millers participated in 16 shows which took them to Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey and throughout Pennsylvania.

"Although we'd like to go to more shows, that's all we have time to do," John explained, "because it takes a lot of preparation."

"We love the shows," Linda said. "We enjoy meeting the people. It takes a lot of work and we come home dead tired on our feet, but it is worth it."

Within four years, John and Linda Miller have watched their dried flower service bloom into a booming business.

With a baby and three other children, Linda often arranges flowers while "mothering."

Behind the glamour of successful shows, looms much hard work and planning. John said that they need to plan three years in advance for perennials since they seldom produce blooms before that time.

Then, there are the weeds to contend with. John, Linda, one full-time and several part-time employees find that they work best by doing everything together. So together they tackle the weeds by hoeing.

The second year, the Millers planted eight acres of flower seeds, but they couldn't keep after the required work and they found local labor was too high to make it profitable. Since then they plant five acres of flowers annually, and to increase their stock, they import roses and statice fresh from South American and then dry it. They also buy direct from a New Jersey grower.

For the Millers, it is a family business. Their three oldest children Chad, 9; Nita, 7; Katy, 3, help pick and weed the flowers. Linda said, "Actually, they do a better job picking then most of our employees. Because they grew up with it, they just seem to know how mature a bloom should be for picking."

The children like to assist their parents when they attend shows. They help fill the stands with flowers that have been transported by the three trailers their parents own.

Their older children help entertain the baby and Linda said, "I couldn't do it without John's help. He pitches in with the cooking and cleaning."

"But," John interjected, "I only do the basic steps in flower arranging, Linda adds the final touch to flower arrangements."

Linda's parents own Kreider's Mum Farm which retails to flower shops and businesses. On the side they also grow flowers to dry. Although Linda had studied floriculture in school and then worked several years as a floral arranger, she said her unique flower arranging ideas "come from God."

She admits that she is very particular with her designing. She said, "It's hard to find someone who is really good at flower arranging."

For containers, they buy baskets and pottery in bulk. In addition to designing arrangements that Linda said are all unique, the Millers put together eight varieties of mixed bouquets which they repeatedly use. "They're something everyone can afford to buy," Linda explained.

It is a year-round operation. And Linda said, "I like the variety it offers. In the spring there is the excitement of anticipating a good year. I'm eager to try new things and curious to see how the flowers will dry."

The summer season dictates picking and hoeing the colorful blooms. "It's more of an incentive to keep the flower beds clean when you can actually see the results," John said. During the winter months, they arrange flowers from their stock.

The arts and crafts shows are interspersed throughout the year. Some of the bouquets are not as easy to make, "but," Linda said, "when you see the customers' faces light up when they buy them, it makes all the hard work worthwhile."

Depending where the show is located, the Millers adjust the type of arrangements they show. "The wealthier areas like the newer color trends," Linda said. Regardless of where they sell, "We don't hear people complain that our prices are too high.

People often remarked, 'Do you know how much I'd need to pay for this if I bought it in flower shop?'"

The Millers admit that to keep on top of everything they spent "too many hours" in the business. Every aspect of the work requires hand labor. Linda said, "When we're tired, we work anyway." And sometimes that means from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

John said, "The business has actually outgrown us." They do not desire to get bigger since they feel there are too many negative aspects to operating a larger business.

It is a lot of hard work, but the Millers now have a prospering wholesale and retail business. "It offers us a nice living," John admitted.

Linda added, "Everything happened by word-of-mouth. We never did any advertising."

Little Valley Farm keeps blooming profits. Its entrepreneur owners aren't complaining. They believe the avian flu turned ot to be a blessing in disquise for them. "It's more money than chickens and we like it better," they both claim.

Summer and fall seasons find the Millers picking blooms from their five acres of flowers. Left to right, Nancy Stoltzfus, full-time employee, John and Linda Miller.

Preserving Flowers and Foliage The Easy Way

Expert Grace Rymer gives the latest tips on drying flowers in the microwave oven.

A new miracle in the floral design world has come about with the use of microwave ovens. Besides the many conveniences of microwave cooking in your kitchen, the microwave oven enables you to dry flowers, which ordinarily take up to six weeks to dry, in a matter of minutes.

This new technique gives fresher appearing, more colorful materials for use in floral designs.

Preparation for microwave drying requires a supportive substance for flowers that wilt. The drying substance, or agent, absorbs moisture so the flower can dry in its three dimensional shape as in its natural form.

I have found three drying agents to be most effective. First is Silica-Gel, available in most hobby shops. Second, is an equal mixture of borax and corn meal can be used. The third agent which is inexpensive and easiest to use is kitty litter. Sift the kitty litter for a smooth drying material. It has great absorbing quality and is made of ground clay. For smoother surfaces, such as an orchid or daisy, Silica-Gel is most satisfactory. All of these agents can be used over and over again.

Containers for drying can be any size of glass or paper - dessert, cereal size bowls, show boxes, also cardboard platters. Here is a step-by-step procedure for drying flowers:

1. Select fresh flowers or leaves you desire to make permanent.

2. Select container deep enough so the agent (litter, borax solution or gel) can cover the entire bottom.

3. Place a one-half inch layer of the drying agent in container. Clip stem of flower about one-half inch long. Then place flowers in agent, face up. With a spoon, sprinkle granules of the agent gently between petals of flowers making certain every petal is covered and not bent out of shape by the weight of the agent. Petals should be completely covered so that they are not visible.

4. After flowers are carefully covered by agent, then slip dish into microwave oven and also place inside the oven a dish of water to provide moisture. Set oven about one to three minutes, depending upon the particular flower. (Later on in this article, you can learn how to estimate proper oven time, depending upon the characteristics of the flower or leaf you choose to dry.)

5. After flowers have been cooked, remove from oven and leave in agent for at least 36 hours. When removing flower from agent, gently tap the flower until all the granules of the agent are removed.

6. One of the most important problems is storage of these beautiful blooms - until you need them in your design. I have found plastic shoe and garment boxes work fine. Place a thin section of Styrofoam in the base of the boxes - then place into flower head position into Styrofoam with a long corsage pin. Small bank pins are sufficient for smaller flowers. These can then stacked away, yet in full view until needed.

7. Stem sections can be added to the flowers when needed in design, by using a florist wire 18 inches, gauge number 20. Floral tape the entire length, forming a loop on one end, then use a quick drying glue spread lightly over the circle and place flower into position. Cut the wires according to the length needed in your arrangement.

8. After your flowers are dry - sometimes they become brittle and may shatter when placed in the design. I have found a really remarkable way to avoid this. Use a Humidifier. Wave the flower through the steam - it then becomes pliable as in the fresh stage. After you have placed the flowers in the arrangement it will again become dry and retain the original form.

Flowers dried in this manner are not as dry and perishable as flowers dried the old way. They feel and look more like fresh flowers. While the agent is drying the flowers, they are also drying our hands so it's wise to use rubber gloves, regardless of how you dry your flowers.

A glass container filled with water and set inside the oven can protect the flowers from completely drying out. This is a must!

Like everything else worth doing at all, drying flowers must be done properly to get the best results. All flowers should be picked just as they are reaching their peak of bloom. If picked past their prime, when they have already started to turn brown, flowers will continue the browning process and nothing will successfully prevent this. Correct timing, therefore is the first requisite.

When drying roses use Silica-Gel or a smooth substance. Carefully cover with the agent - sprinkle between each petal until completely submerged. Place in oven for 2½ minutes. Let stand in the agent over night or longer. One or several roses can be dried at once - using the same timing.

When drying miniature roses and smaller flowers such as Pansies, approximately 1½ minutes baking time is all that is necessary, with about 10 hours set-up time. Daisies, small Dahlias, Black-Eyed Susans, Zinnias, Marigolds, Carnations and small type Chrysanthemums, again use 2½ minutes - with about 10 hours cooling off period. Large Dahlias, Peonies, Chinese Peonies, large Chrysanthemums bake approximately three minutes - and let stand in drying agent about 36 hours. Orchids should be baked in Silica-Gel for approximately (according to size) 1½ minutes - with set up time of 24 hours.

9. Drying Foliage: it can be microwaved dry, particularly the beautiful ones of interesting color and texture that are available in the fall. Leaves can form the major part of winter arrangements, with just a few flowers used in the focal area. Microwave drying fall leaves retains their beautiful color.

Place a shallow box lid or platter in the bottom of the oven, next place a section of paper towel over the box, then the paper towel. Then start layering your leaves with paper towels. Use as large a spray of leaves as will easily go into the oven. The oven can be almost full. (Clean the leaves before placing into the oven.)

Turn the microwave oven to 1½ minutes and when the bell rings, turn leaves and towels completely over and repeat same process, giving a total of three minutes in all. Remove branches when the bell rings and the leaves are dry and beautiful - no setup time is needed - they are ready for placement in your design.

Cookout King Grills Lip-Smacking Ribs

BY LOU ANN GOOD

MANHEIM — The aroma of barbequed pork drifted across the Manheim Farmshow grounds on Monday night causing many a mouth to water. It was the Pennsylvania Pork Cookout King Contest where contestants were judged not only on their pork dishes but also their abilities to represent the pork industry at major functions.

Prospective pork kings explained their cooking methods to onlookers, offered free samples, and arranged an attractive place setting that complimented their tastiest grilled pork.

After every morsel had been tasted and the judges compared notes, Ron Wilson of Harrisburg was crowned the official Pennsylvania Pork King.

Ron, a non-professional chef, convinced both the crowd and the judges that "Ron's Brodacious Ribs" offers flavor that's hard to beat. The new king said his original Lancaster County sauce is aimed at getting flavor into the meat rather than on top of it.

PA Pork Cookout King Ron Wilson displays his winning hat and apron.

Eighteen-year-old Jeff holds the swan that he carved from an apple.

Joan Liesau of the PA Meat Marketing Program, who served as a judge said, she and the two other judges were in agreement that Ron's pork had an interesting flavor. She said, "His marinating sauce gave the ribs a subtle taste that brought out the natural flavor rather than masking it."

As a policy analysist for the Governor's Office of Policy Development in Economic Trade, Ron spotted the Department of Agriculture's news release publicizing the contest. Ron had only a week to plan his menu. He took the day off to visit the area. He said, "We had never visited Manheim before, but this experience assures fond memories for the future."

The Pork King credits his cooking success to his grandmother, who believed that one should have all the tools needed in order to survive, one of which is cooking. Ron said, "She didn't need to force me to learn, I enjoyed it."

As Pork King, Ron received $300. He will represent the pork industry by traveling throughout the state with a state agriculture department employee to promote pork at shopping malls, farm shows and other public gatherings.

Although Ron is an amateur chef and has entered only one other contest, his wife Kathryn said,

Microwave Cooking

AUDREY HALLGREN

Fall has always been my "favorite" season. The fact that I am a "Connecticut Yankee" probably is the main reason I appreciate the fall colors- not only the vivid autumn leaves but also the outstanding blue skies! When I think about fall, certain foods immediately come to mind... apples, pumpkin, squash, and hearty soups and stews. It is the peak season for many of these favorites. Use your microwave oven for the perfect way to prepare dishes incorporating them.

Sweetly Seasoned Punch

3 pounds Hubbard squash
¼ cups packed brown sugar
2 Tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup miniature marshmallows
Cinnamon

1. Remove seeds and membrane from a 3-pound section of squash. Place cut-side-down in 12x8-inch glass baking dish. Cover with plastic wrap.

2. Microwave (high) 23-25 minutes or until squash is just about tender, rotating dish once or twice.

3. Cool enough to handle. Scoop out squash. If desired, process in food processor or blender until smooth. Place in 1½ -quart glass casserole. Add brown sugar, butter and salt.

4. Microwave (high), uncovered, 6-7 minutes or until heated through, stirring once. Sprinkle with marshmallows and a little cinnamon.

5. Microwave (high), uncovered, 1-2 minutes or until marshmallows are puffed.

Spaghetti Squash With Sauce

Enjoy the spaghetti-like flesh of this summer squash without the calories of pasta. This is one of my family's favorites and makes an interesting accompaniment to any meat.

1 small spaghetti squash (about 2½ pounds)
½ pound ground beef
1 jar (15½ ounces) spaghetti sauce (your favorite homemade spaghetti sauce can be substituted.)
1 Tablespoon butter or margarine
½ teaspoon parsley flakes

1. Pierce squash several times with fork to allow steam to escape. Place squash on paper towels in microwave oven.

2. Microwave (high), uncovered, 13-15 minutes or until squash is tender, turning squash over once during cooking. Let stand 10 minutes.

3. Crumble ground beef into 1-quart glass casserole.

4. Microwave (high) uncovered, 2-2½ minutes or until meat is set, stirring once. Drain. Stir in spaghetti sauce.

5. Microwave (high), uncovered, 5-6 minutes or until sauce is bubbly and heated through, stirring once.

6. Cut squash in half crosswise; scoop out seeds. Unwind spaghetti-like flesh with fork onto serving plate. Dot with butter; sprinkle with parsley. Toss lightly. Serve with sauce. If desired, sprinkle with Parmesan.

Tip- For other sizes, microwave about 6 minutes per pound.

Hot Apple Snacks

2 Apples
2 teaspoons honey
Cinnamon

1. Peel apples, if desired. Quarter and remove cores. Cut each quarter in half to make 16 pieces. Place in 2-cup glass casserole or measure. Drizzle with honey. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Cover with lid or plastic wrap.

2. Microwave (high) 3-4 minutes or until just about tender. Let stand covered a few minutes. Serve warm or cold. These are so crunchy that the whole family will surely enjoy them!

Cookout King Grills

"He's an expert at outdoor cooking."

Ron praised his wife as being his chief assistant and critic. "She's a great cook. We both loving cooking and often discuss our ideas and try them."

The Wilsons dream of some day having their own restaurant business. Ron said, "When the time is right, we'll know it." And both agree that this award pushes them a little nearer to their vision.

Two runners up Denise Hossler, Manheim, and Jeff Wenger, Mount Joy, received $100 awards. Eighteen-year-old Jeff is a caterer for his dad's business called Wenger's Meats and Fine Foods. Ron garnished his ham loaf with an intricately carved swan made from an apple and with other festive touches. Denise Hossler, a chef at the Colebrook Tavern and Eli's in Lebanon, prepared a pork tenderloin with creme' cognac.

Other judges for the contest were Dave Stittler, regional director of Pennsylvania Agriculture and David Reinecher, president of Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council. Robert Fahnestock of Lititz coordinated the contest.

Torture Of Being A Fair Judge

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

MANHEIM — The question is always the same - why did I agree to be a judge? It doesn't matter if the judging is Dairy Princess contestants, apple pies, cows, casseroles or scrapbooks, there is always an uneasy feeling that it would have been a lot easier to say, "no."

During fair season hundreds of ordinary people put themselves through a strange kind of agony deciding who should get blue, who should get white, who should get special notice. It is not easy.

This week presented a new experience for me - judging the contestants in the Shepherd's Lead Line competition at the Manheim Fair. These were 4-H'ers, dressed spectacularly in wool with beautifully groomed and coordinated sheep, modeling themselves and their animals for the purpose of promoting wool.

They were all grand - both the 4-H'ers and the sheep! Fortunately there were two judges whose scores were totalled, so I could concentrate on just my part of the contest.

How did they look? How much wool did their garments have? Were they enjoying themselves?

Of course, they all looked wonderful, and their fresh, attractive appearance in itself had to convert some of the spectators to the wonders of wool. Were they nervous? Well, some enjoyed it a lot more than others. Sometimes a nervous twitch in the smile showed the true feeling of the smiling contestant. Perhaps, on the other hand, they were just cold, as I was while trying to write constructive comments.

My comments tended to be very

positive - contestants reading them later may have wondered why each one of them wasn't first. If I had my choice, of course, they all would be first, but, alas, even ties are not allowed.

The few cries of "no way" which greeted the announcement of the final placing hurt. Certainly each fan has his favorite, and each contestant had done a wonderful job. Nevertheless, it was a competition, and there had to be a final order. Hopefully the disappointment passes, and all contestants will try again.

The old cliche, "every contestant is a winner" is especially true of this lead line competition. What courage it takes for an 11-year-old boy to model in front of a crowd! Or for a teenager, whose worst fears are always about what people will think.

What the whole audience should think is what wonderful 4-H'ers we have to join the spirit of the competition and help promote that wonderful natural, renewable fabric - wool.

Every child who modeled (and every parent who urged, supported, cajoled, and worried) deserves a pat on the back. That is the reward for the difficult job of judging - to see children grow and learn from a competitive atmosphere. Perhaps that is why some of us are willing to submit to this strange unique form of torture called "judging."

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This morning, while doing the breakfast dishes, I glanced outside and saw six bluejays clinging to the heads of six sunflower plants in my garden. I fear there will be no seeds left by the time winter arrives but they certainly would have made a wonderful picture.

Last week my husband and I drove to the Bloomsburg Fair. It was a beautiful day and the maple trees had their red, yellow and orange leaves all ready for display. Flower gardens were abloom with chrysanthemums and golden petals seemed to be predominant.

We watched mothers describe the many different animals to their small children and I was reminded of the long ago times when we did the same thing. There are so many different breeds of chickens, goats, pigs, ducks and other species that it is difficult to remember all of their names.

When we ate our noon meal served by a local church, we met people from Florida, Allentown and Philipsburg. Afterwards, I persuaded my husband to let a man guess his age as I think that he doesn't look as old as he is. But, the fellow was wise and only guessed him two years younger than his actual age.

The grandstand was packed with people watching the horse races in the afternoon. It was fun to try to pick a winner among the trotters and pacers on the track. We were entertained with band music between races.

We tried to take a picture of some of the giant pumpkins which weighed 234 and 268 pounds but the crowds were so big that people were constantly standing in front of them. I always enjoy the Grange displays as they have such a large assortment of fruits, nuts and vegetables. Even unusual things like quinces, salsify and canned patty pan squash.

We each got a cone of Italian ice cream before we boarded the bus which took us out into the parking lot where we hunted for our car.

Pennsylvania Youth Honored By State

HARRISBURG — Four youth were honored for their outstanding achievements in 4-H and FFA activities at the annual banquet meeting of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association, held Friday night in conjunction with the 31st Annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

The 4-H Outstanding Youth were Clark Bruner of Blairsville, Indiana County, and Rachel Hixenbaugh of Beaver, Beaver County, while Greg Stricker of Bernville, Berks County, and Michele Snook of Beavertown, Snyder County, received the Outstanding FFA Boy and Girl Awards.

Bruner, the 18-year-old son of Clark and Gladys Bruner, is a 1987 graduate of Blairsville Vale Technical School and presently attends an automotive mechanics trade school. An active member of the Gordon 4-H Club, Bruner has served as the president, vice-president and news reporter. His 4-H projects and accomplishments are extensive, having participated in the swine, sheep, steers, vegetable gardening, turkey, chicken, feeder pigs, teen leader, commodity marketing and veterinary science programs. He has participated on the regional and state livestock judging teams and competed in the State Pork Bowl.

Rachel Hixenbaugh is the 19-year-old daughter of Joseph and Kathryn Hixenbaugh. She is presently a freshman at Slippery Rock University majoring in communications and public relations. Rachel has excelled in a variety of projects, including market lambs and breeding sheep, pet care, market hogs, market rabbits, sewing, leadership, and market steers. Her 4-H participation took her to the State Leadership Congress, Club Congress, Leadership School, as well as many county and regional activities. Rachel also received special honors for her knowledge and involvement in the sheep industry, having been the National Suffolk Princess, Pennsylvania Suffolk Queen and the Butler-Beaver-Lawrence County Lamb and Wool Queen.

Future Farmer of America Outstanding Boy was Greg Stricker, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Stricker. His supervised occupational experience projects included breeding swine, market hogs, breeding beef, market beef, corn and hay. He has achieved a two-pound gain per day on his market hogs, developed home bred and raised champion Durocs for the Allentown Fair, reduced calving intervals from 15 months to just over 11 months, cut mortality in his pig litter in half, and increased his corn yield by ten percent. Greg was named the Star Chapter Farmer, County Delegate to the State Convention, and was ranked third in Pennsylvania in Diversified Livestock Proficiency among his many awards. His goal is to develop a beef and swine farm.

Michele Snook is a 1987 graduate of West Snyder High School. She participated in supervised occupational experience programs including beef growing and breeding, swine finishing, dairy goats, home garden and strawberries. She has served as the assistant reporter and chaplain of her local chapter. Michele has participated in local and SUN area livestock judging contests and dairy judging. Her previous honors include Greenhand, Chapter, Area and Keystone Degrees, a scholarship award winner and Snyder County Farm Credit project record book contest winner.

Roadside Tomato Stand Grows Into Gigantic Cannery

BARBARA MILLER
Lycoming Co. Correspondent

NORTHUMBERLAND — In the Wizard of Oz, Dorothy follows the yellow brick road until she finds the wizard who shows her the way back to her Kansas home. Likewise, tomatoes at Furman Foods Inc., Northumberland, do a vibrating dance along a "red tomato road" during processing until later, in cans, they line pantry shelves of homes across the land.

It's that time of year again when canneries, like homemakers, scurry to process one of the nation's favorite foods, the tomato. Although the average homemaker sometimes panics processing a few bushel of fruit, canneries like Furman's contend with the problems involved in processing 15 to 20 ton tractor trailer load quantities. According to Jim Kohl, in charge of raw products procurement at Furmans, the plant sometimes processes 18,000 tons of tomatoes in a single day.

Last year, Kohl reports, Furman's packed 1,286,500 cases of crushed and whole tomatoes and harvested approximately 50,000 tons of the product from 2700 acres located on 325 farms in the Susquehanna Valley. In addition, they buy tomatoes from as far south as Lancaster and as far north as New York state. During tomato season which lasts from the middle of August until the middle of October, the plant's usual number of 185 employees swells to 600. According to Kohl, their Northumberland location has about 20 acres under-roof and they rent additional space at other locations.

Furmans process more tomatoes than any other commodity, but last year at the plant, they also packed 306,875 cases of snap beans, 80,555 cases of peppers, 80,400 cases of peas, and 1,400,000 cases of dry pack dried beans. That's a total of more than 3 million cases of canned goods for the year.

Although individual procedures vary, canneries process tomatoes in much the same way as homemakers. The fruit is inspected first, then washed, scalded to remove the skins, sorted, and packed in cans.

The first stop for truckloads coming into the plant is an inspection station where Georgine Dudeck, grading inspector for the Pa. Dept. of Agriculture, takes three core samples from each load which totals approximately 100 pounds. The tomatoes are graded according to government established specifications; if more than three percent material other than tomatoes - such as stems, rocks, and dirt - is present and it contains more than six percent decay, a trailer will not pass inspection.

After a load has passed inspection it is taken to the scales where a computer keeps a running tab on the amount of tomatoes per load for each grower as well as tabulating the total amount of tomatoes in stock.

In an outside bay that can accomodate six trailers, three may be unloaded at the same time. "We can unload a "18 to 23 ton trailer in as little as 20 minutes," Kohl notes.

The unloading is accomplished by pumping water into the load which floats the tomatoes off the truck into a flume where they are picked up by a conveyor, washed, and scalded by machine. After scalding, the tomatoes rotate along a conveyor single file underneath rotating "knives" which slice through just the skin of the tomato. Then the conveyor literally puts the squeeze on the tomatoes until they "pop" their skins.

The tomatoes are then sorted with the most perfect ones separated by workers for processing as whole tomatoes and the remaining ones for various other purposes such as crushed tomatoes, pizza and tomato sauce. Human hands seldom touch the tomatoes, although there are several points along the way where the tomatoes are inspected by humans to maintain quality.

"Some of the tomatoes go to giant 100 ton evaporators where they are cooked down under a vacuum which saves fuel costs," Kohl says. Other tomatoes go through a tomato pasteurizer which pasteurizes them by passing them through a pipe within a pipe.

The tomatoes are under constant scrutiny. "Every 10 to 15 minutes," says Grace Kohl, lab technician, "we check the tomatoes for color, tomato solids, ph acidity, mold count, and consistency." If there is a problem with a product, Furmans can usually isolate it six minutes after it goes through the plant.

The smell of spicy sauces mixed with green peppers emanates from the area where the sauces are prepared. Imagine cooking in a 2,000 gallon pot that rises to the height of a second story. At the second story level tehcnicians at Furmans mix various sauces in twelve such steaming pots 8 to 10 feet in diameter. Vinegar, corn syrup and sugar are piped directly into them ixing tanks, but salt is added manually from stores of 25 pound bags. Kohl adds that live steam is piped into the vats to hasten the cooking.

Standing on the lower floor of the cannery again, one is conscious of cans of tomatoes, like shiny meteorites, whizzing along overhead propelled by conveyors at high speeds. According to Kohl, the machine that puts the lids on the cans is capable of capping from 480 to 600 cans per minute.

The cans then go to a 50 ft. high by 22 ft. diameter brick hydrostatic cooker where they are processed with steam. "The hydrostatic cooker has seven tunnels up and down where as many as 30,000 cans are processed simultaneously between 23 to 48 minutes," reports Kohl. He adds that they do everything they can to avoid a breakdown of the hydrostatic cooker ince, "A breakdown of the cooker may cost us anywhere from $8,000 to $25,000."

Furmans use natural gas for fuel and in a single day at the height of the canning season, they burn 1,500,000 cubic feet of the fuel, according to Kohl.

Caseloads of unlabeled cans are then taken via a forklift to one of the 15 gigantic warehouses where they are stacked in 30-foot high "bright stacks." The cans are labeled just before they are shipped. Jim reports that Furmans process 200 items under 900 labels with the largest selling label being "Furmano's Crushed Tomatoes." He said their plant is the largest maker of pizza sauce in the East.

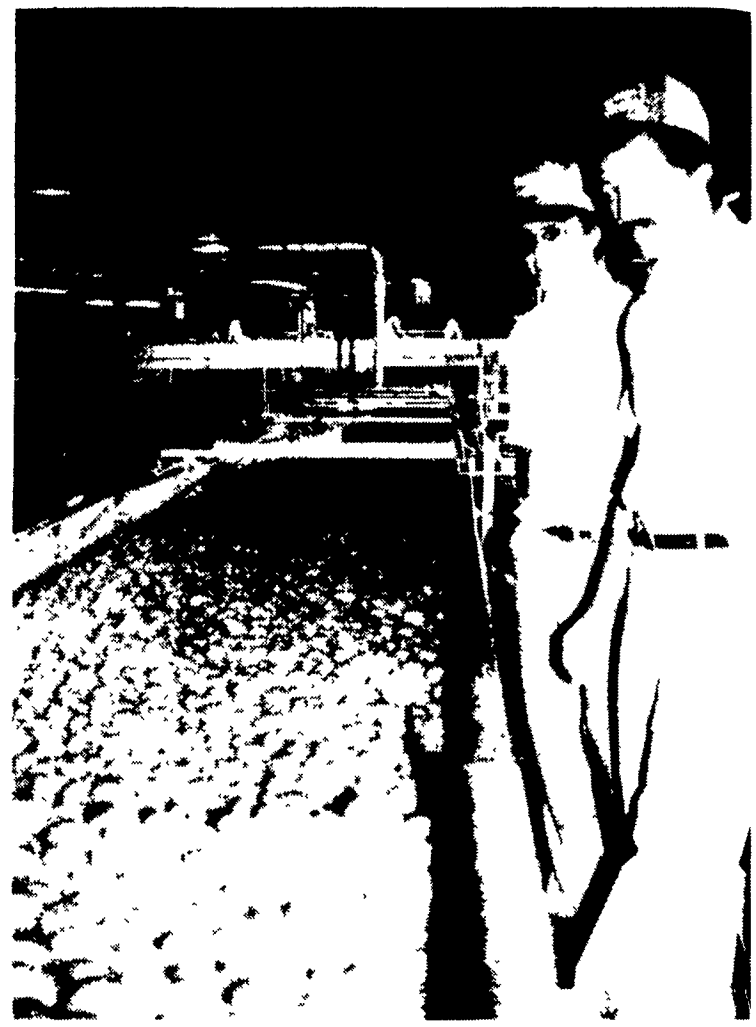
Kohl proudly shows off a Glastik see-through plastic container that Furmans has been using to market their spaghetti sauce for the past year and a half. "We refer to it as our view to the future in the spaghetti sauce business," says Kohl with a grin.

He adds that the container is tamperproof and unbreakable and that they are the only ones in the world using this type of container for spaghetti sauce at this time.

Furmans own and rent 2,000 acres which they plant in tomatoes each year besides contracting with farmers to grow tomatoes. According to Kohl, they will be needing more growers for tomatoes and peppers for the 1988 crop year.

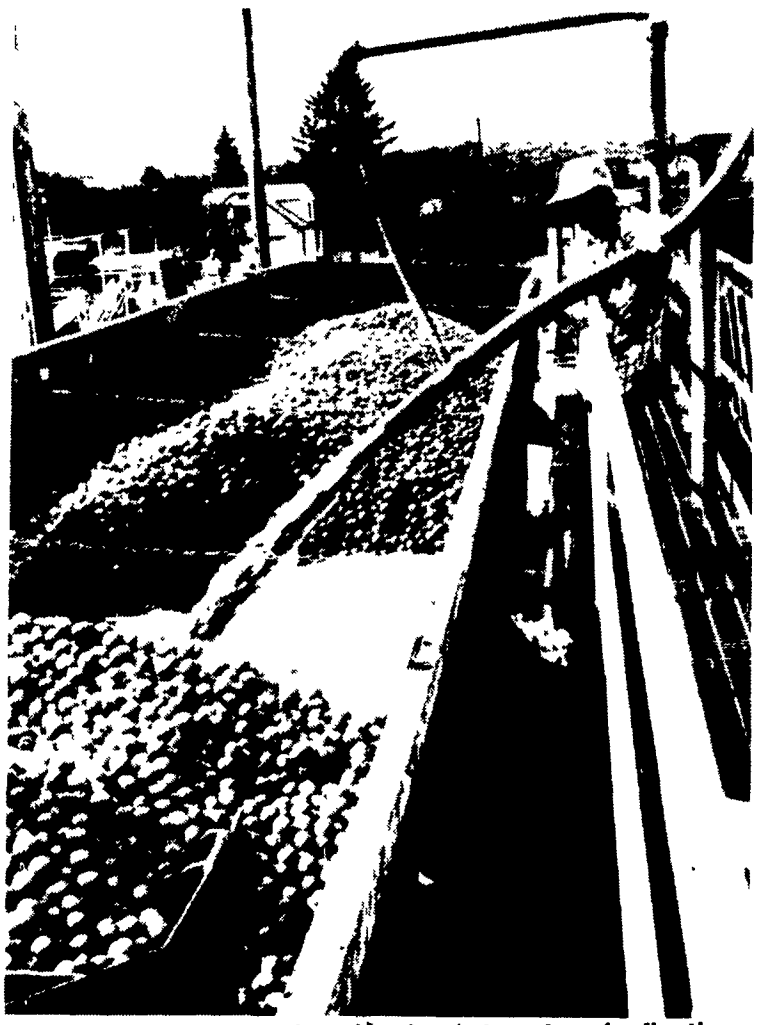
One r t say the Furman family started traveling a red tomato road 66 years ago in 1921 when John Wesley Furman, founder of the company and his family first

(Turn to Page B23)

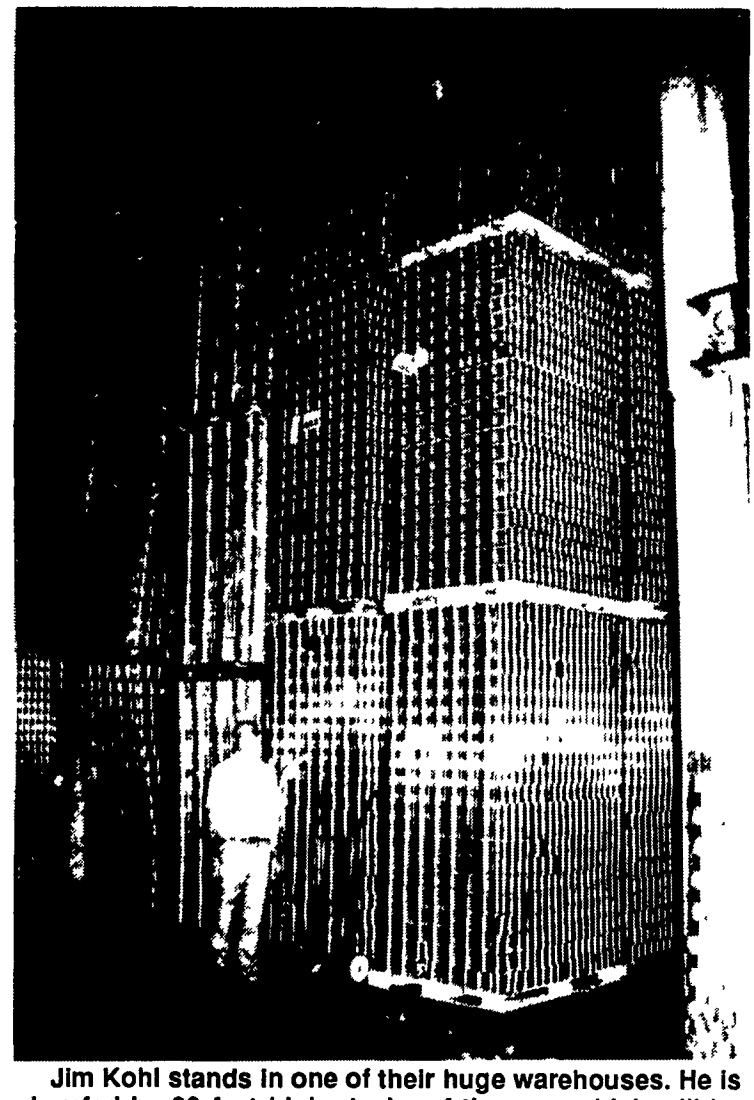


Tomatoes on "tomato road." They have just been scalded, their skins removed, and "vibrated" along to the next step where they will be separated between whole tomatoes processing and crushed tomatoes. Jim Kohl, with dark glasses, and Dwight Hess, fieldman, watch the process.

Giant evaporators outside the building with cooling towers gives off steam. The giant evaporators, shiny upright stainless steel columns, hold about 100 tons of tomatoes. Here the product is cooked down under a vacuum.



Carl Dunkle, an employee, unloads tomatoes by floating them off to the flume which carries them to the plant for processing.



Jim Kohl stands in one of their huge warehouses. He is dwarfed by 30 feet high stacks of tin cans which will be labeled just before shipping out.

Eat Foods With Adequate Starch And Fiber

PENN STATE — The major source of energy (calories) in the American diet are carbohydrates and fats.

There are two types of carbohydrates — simple and complex.

Simple carbohydrates are sugars: complex carbohydrates are starches. Both types have the same caloric content. But most foods high in sugar content contain little or no vitamins and minerals. Foods high in starch (breads and other grain products, dry beans and peas, and potatoes) contain many essential nutrients.

Americans get about half of their calories from carbohydrates — but nutritionists agree we should get more.

Carbohydrates are especially helpful in weight-reduction diets because, ounce for ounce, they contain about half as many calories as fats do. If you reduce carbohydrates in your diet, you'll probably make up your energy needs with more fat. This is the misguided approach to nutrition that many follow who fail to realize that fat gives you 9 calories per gram and carbohydrates only 4 calories per gram. One of the problems with low-carbohydrate diets that are often promoted: you might eat more calories because of the increased amount of fat that you add when you drop the carbohydrates.

Carbohydrates, then, are the primary source of quick and efficient energy for the body. They are also important for body functions, such as fuel for the brain. It's a good idea to substitute starchy foods for those with large amounts of fat and sugars.

Eating more foods containing complex carbohydrates can also add dietary fiber to your diet; the American diet is relatively low in fiber. Dietary fiber is a term used to describe parts of plant foods that are generally not digestible by humans. Foods differ in the kinds of fiber they contain, and it's best to include a variety of fiber-rich foods: whole grain breads, cereals, fruits, and vegetables.

High-fiber foods have been found to reduce symptoms of chronic constipation, diverticular disease, and some types of "irritable bowel." It has been suggested that low fiber intake may increase the risk of developing colon cancer, but this is not substantiated.

One concern about fiber intake is its possible adverse effect on absorption of essential minerals, resulting in fecal loss of minerals. But this is unusual, and the average person can add more fiber without ill effects. Eat whole fruits like apples and oranges rather than juice; eat whole grain breads or new high fiber breads; sprinkle bran or oats on casseroles and vegetables; use brown rice instead of white.

Some high fiber cereals are 100% Bran, Corn Bran and Corn Flakes; additional high fiber fruits are raisins and bananas; high fiber vegetables are potatoes with and without skins, green beans, lettuce, and cucumber.

By planning meals with less meat and more high fiber foods, you can improve your grocery budget — and your family's health, as well.

Tomato Stand

canned up the excess tomatoes from their garden and offered them for sale. From then on the Furman company has been a family affair. Kohl, grandson of John Wesley, credits the success of the company to people who work for Furmans. "The whole program works because of the people involved," he states.

But following another family tradition, he also gives credit to an additional source. A visitor to Furmans reception room may notice a red Bible on an end table. Another red family-sized Bible lies in the middle of the conference table of the company's conference room. "We read the Bible in the conference room before every board meeting and have devotions and prayer," says Jim. "We have a very strong commitment to what our faith is. We only have what He gives us and we need direction of how to use it," he explains.

Seventy-six year old Foster Furman, the company's vice president in charge of legislation affairs and a son of John Wesley Furman, evidently concurs with his nephew. For a recent article in the "Sunday Grit" quoted him as saying, "I believe strongly in Psalms 127:1. 'Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.' I really believe that's true."

Citizenship Projects Fascinate 4-H'ers

LANCASTER — During National 4-H Week, October 5-12, attention is focused on the 4-H program and the opportunities it offers young people. Citizenship and leadership are two qualities which are frequently mentioned as important by-products of the actual skills associated with taking 4-H projects.

Most of the training for citizenship and leadership comes as a result of participating in club meetings, county, regional and state activities. Interacting as club members and completing projects helps young people assume leadership roles and assimilate citizenship responsibilities.

One group of 4-H'ers in Lancaster County got their citizenship training on a more formal basis, by enrolling in a 4-H citizenship project. Through the project book and other activities, they learned a great deal more about their role as a citizen.

The Mountville 4-H Community Club offered two citizenship projects, one focusing on "my community," and one focusing on "my government."

The older 4-H'ers who studied the government unit had the unique experience of serving as guest pages in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. Arranged through the office of Representative Kenneth Brandt (R-98th District), they worked for a day, providing copies of bills, providing roll call vote lists, and just generally running errands for members of the House when they were in session. They carried out their duties under the watchful eye of members of the House staff, and they worked from the front of the floor of the House of Representatives, where they had a close-up view of their elected representatives in action.

Kenny Mowrer, 13, left, and Seth Bair, 12, learned about West Hempfield Township as part of the Citizenship project they took as members of the Mountville Community 4-H Club.

Included in their day at Capitol Hill was a tour of the newly refurbished state capitol building and a visit with Representative Brandt. The experience was an eye-opener.

David Dumeyer, research staff, House Agriculture and Rural Affairs committee, who served as leader for the project and made the arrangements for the "guest-page" opportunity, said, "Working on the floor of the House of Representatives made them more aware of how the government functions. They were able to see the more mundane things a Representative does as well as the more important things."

Indeed, several of the 4-H'ers expressed surprise at the seemingly "casual" attitude which sometimes prevailed through the procedures.

An educator before going into state government, Dumeyer sees the citizenship project as an opportunity for the youth to gain "an appreciation of the job a legislator has to do, and to see that they work in an environment that is different from other occupations." He adds, "More than anything else, the project increases their awareness that government will only get better if they take part in it. This may make them less reluctant to get involved."

Tina Mowrer, 16, says of her experience, "It was fun. I learned a lot more about the branches of government." Erica Zimmerman, 16, agreed, "It was an interesting project."

Children Communicate With Egocentric Speech

Parents have a tremendously important job to fulfill in rearing their children in today's world. It is the parents who, according to one writer, provide the fundamental training in ways of relating and communicating in social groups.

PARENTS TEACH BASICS

The child learns the basics of communication from his/her parent. The lessons learned first in the family will be used by the child throughout his life. Beginning with the very young child and continuing into the preschool years, the importance of the parent giving attention to the child needs to be stressed. Giving our attention to a newborn is easy compared with giving attention to a toddler who talks a mile-a-minute.

The infant does certain things that gain our attention. He will smile, make sounds of movements. All of these actions have the power to draw our attention to that child. But as the child becomes more advanced in his ability to move about, we may find ourselves not giving the child the kind of attention he still needs.

YOUR ATTENTION IS IMPORTANT

If you have a toddler or preschooler, just what kind of attention do you give the child? What do you do with your eyes or your face when the child attempts to tell you something? Do you turn and look at the child, or do you just listen to him without even turning your head?

This whole idea of paying attention, by the way, is one of the most fundamental aspects of communication.

WHAT YOU REALLY SAY

When a toddler or preschooler says something to you, it is very easy to continue what you are doing and not pay attention. yet, what you do or don't do with your eyes, face or body is vitally important. By turning toward the child and looking at him, you convey to the child a sense of interest. You are saying with your body that what the child is saying is important enough to command your attention. Further, you are conveying to the child a deeper sense of personal importance--that he, as a person, is worth your attention.

The result of this paying attention is that the child, given a steady dose or diet of this kind of parental behavior, will feel important and will feel worthy, He will have a good feeling about himself.

Given an inadequate diet of attention, the child may soon feel that what he says is unimportant, that he just doesn't have whatever it takes to get Mom or Dad to pay attention to him. The child can soon transfer these feelings of unimportance to his very being.

PRACTICE GIVING ATTENTION

A technique you can practice and use when the child is speaking to you or when you are speaking to the child is to get down on the child's level. Get your body in a position that conveys that you are interested and that you value what the child is saying.

Be more aware of what you do with your eyes and face when Junior or Miss is speaking. The eyes tell a lot to the person with whom we are talking. So with the child.

FEEL AS CHILD FEELS

You may want to try a little exercise to test this idea. The next time your spouse or a friend approaches you to tell you something, simply turn your back or don't pay any attention to the person speaking. See what happens! Ask that person just how he felt when you turned your back while he was speaking. At the very least the person might say that you were very rude or that you certainly didn't appear to be very interested.

The child feels the same way. Seldom will the child have all the words and ideas necessary to convey this same feeling to the parent. But the child still experiences the feelings.

Giving the child attention with our face, eyes, and body takes a bit of practice, a little time and some effort. But it means and says so much to a young child.

Citizenship Projects

burg for a day, members visited the county court house, and learned of the work of the various departments. They met with an attorney in the court room and learned how the courts function in Lancaster County, and they visited the County Commissioners' offices, learning how these top county policy makers function. The 4-H'ers also visited Representative Robert Walker's 16th Congressional District office and talked with members of his staff.

Work in the project book required them to learn about the judicial system, the duties of various state and county officials, the voting laws and a wide range of county and state government information.

Two of the 4-H'ers studied their local government, visiting the West Hempfield Township Supervisors, the local fire department, the local elementary school and a lifelong resident of the Township, Grace Rodman, R.D. 2, Columbia.

In looking at old maps of the area, the 4-H'ers could see quite clearly the development that has taken place over the years, and they learned about what industries, schools and churches are no longer here. Mrs. Rodman told the 4-H'ers that most of the older residents are of German descent. She said she remembers when she felt she "knew everybody," but adds, "This township is still 'country.' I just hope it doesn't get completely built up."

In each of their interviews, they learned a different view of their community, and some ways in which their participation might be helpful.

There are a total of seven units offered as citizenship projects, ranging in levels 9-12 year olds to a "world" citizenship project for older 4-H'ers. If the whole series were taken, the 4-H'er would learn about citizenship from the standpoint of a family member, a club member, a neighborhood member to the wider citizenship in state, country and world. There is even a project which encourages the study of "my heritage."

These citizenship projects, written on the national level are easily adapted to any community, and offer a unique opportunity to 4-H'ers to become better acquainted with their own "citizenship."

For the Mountville 4-H'ers, it was an educational experience, but one in which the learning was fun.

Pennsylvania Breeders Dominate KILE Draft-Horse Classes

Tom Gilmore and family of Centre Hall took home a blue ribbon for "Ostralien's La Mike," named grand champion Percheron stallion and for "Blackhome D Fantasy," named grand champion Percheron mare. "Ostralien's La Mike" advanced to grand champion after being named junior champion stallion and "Blackhome D Fantasy" became grand champion mare after winning as senior champion mare.

The senior champion Pecheron stallion, "Coady's Creek Coleg," shown by H. Lee Brown of Oxford, was named reserve grand champion stallion, and "Cas-Mar's Count Rex," exhibited by Casey H and M. D. Smail of Blairsville, was reserve senior champion Percheron stallion.

The junior champion Percheron mare "Pennwoods Miss Jodi," shown by John M. and Susan Cole of Centre Hall, was named reserve grand champion mare.

In the Belgian division, Lewis and Gail Biddle and family of Boalsburg, exhibited the grand and junior champion stallion, "Seneca Valley Jeff," as well as the senior champion stallion, "OHF Master's Jazz."

The reserve junior champion stallion, subsequently named reserve grand champion, was "Clairlea's Royal Con," shown by Gary and Ellen Holdsworth of Claysville. Both horses were entered as yearlings.

In the mare competition, the Biddles and the Holdsworths were edged out by Orndorff's Belgians of Waynesburg. "Orndorff's Congolais Princess," winner of the four-year-old and older class, was named grand champion mare, while "Orndorff's Supreme Laura," the pick of the two-year-old mares, was named reserve grand champion.

The Holdsworth's "Clairlea's Jackie Be" won the reserve senior champion mare award, and the Biddles exhibited the reserve junior champion, "OHF Marquette's Gwen."

What Do You Know About Tofu

SOUTHAMPTON — Tofu or soybean curd is a lowfat meat substitute popular in Asian and vegetarian cooking, and now available in many supermarkets and health food stores. It is a rather bland, cheeselike food rich in protein and moisture; this very fact makes it susceptible to the growth of harmful microorganisms.

There have been reported outbreaks of food poisoning and gastrointestinal infections directly related to contaminated tofu. But this doesn't mean you should panic and stop eating it if you enjoy it. Besides protein, it is a good source of hard-to-get calcium if it is made with calcium coagulant, such as calcium sulfate.

There are, however, some precautions you can taken when buying tofu. First, note how it is stored; it should be refrigerated in the same type of case as dairy products. If your supermarket or produce store keeps tofu with fresh produce, the temperature is not cold enough.

Second, check the "use by" date and abide by it. Avoid bulging packages because this may be a sign of bacteria growth.

Third, when you get tofu home, keep it refrigerated until you use it. The remainder of the block should be kept in a clear container submerged in water. It is recommended that you change this water every few days.

Though uncooked tofu is generally safe, cooking kills most microorganisms.

Look to cheese as an economical source of protein. A half pound of a hard-type cheese included in a main dish provides each of four adults with one-fourth their U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of protein per day. Cheese pairs perfectly with their low-cost ingredients such as pasta, potatoes and rice.

Dairy Bowl Champions

Four Montgomery County 4-H club members were named state champions in the Dairy Bowl event during the annual Penn State 4-H Week, held at Penn State's University Campus. They are, from left, Cindy Moser, Barto; Tricia and Sue Curtis, Pine Grove and Paul Gehringer, Bally. With them is Paul Reber, Montgomery County Extension Agent.

Launder Natural Fabrics To Minimize Ironing

Get your old ironing board out of storage because ironing is back in style. Ironing is in because cotton, linen, and silk are in style, informs Maryetta Dorricott, Delaware County Cooperative Extension Home Economist. Durable press finishes, tumble drying and steam irons all help, but proper laundering can make the difference between a tedious or a simple ironing job.

Wash and dry clothing according to the garment's care label. Use the correct water temperature and wash cycle. The 'permanent press' cycle will help prevent wrinkles by cooling the wash water and using a low spin speed. Use your automatic dryer correctly, too. Dry lightweight and heavy items separately. Set the dryer for the correct temperature and time, then don't overload it.

When the cycle is completed, remove items from the dryer promptly. Smooth the seams, collars, cuffs, hems and zippers as you hang your clothes. Light wrinkles will usually hang out or require only a touch-up. Remove denim, corduroy, knits and quilted items while they are still slightly damp. They can then be smoothed and hung to finish drying.

If you line-dry your clothes, consider letting garments drip dry. Avoid the final spin cycle so wrinkles are not set into the clothes and they will dry smoother. When you hang the clothes, smooth out wrinkled areas as you would when using the dryer. The weight of the water dripping out will also help smooth the wrinkles.

When using the dryer, remove clothes that require ironing when they are still slightly damp. Store them in a plastic bag until ironing time. If garments are line-dried, they may need to be dampened before ironing. A steam iron and a well-padded ironing board will make ironing easier. Penn State is an affirmative action, equal opportunity university.

SLICK CONCRETE CAN BE ROUGHENED

SCABBLING is an effective way to avoid unnecessary losses of cattle. The SCABBLER makes bands about two inches wide approximately 1/8" to 3/16 in. depth. This gives sufficient area for good footing while allowing you to scrape the smooth surface as before. It is near enough to the surface to give your cows full advantage of the roughness and deep enough to remain effective for years. It greatly aids in heat detection.

And the good news is that it is reasonably priced. You have the choice of doing it yourself or having us do it for you. We offer service right to your door. Call us for more details.

Myers Of York County Named Premier Charolais Breeder At KILE

HARRISBURG — John Myers of Dallastown, York County, came to Harrisburg and managed to take care of business. He was named the premier breeder in the Charolais beef cattle judging at the 31st annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition being held at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

Myers went to the winner's circle twice with his spring yearling bull, "Dunkard Valley Explosion," who was declared the junior champion bull and then the grand champion bull. Myers also had the best breeders herd, produce of dam and junior get of sire. His "Fiddlers Green Miss Gill" was named the reserve grand champion female.

"HVF Consuela," the intermediate champion female, was named the grand champion female of the show for owner Kent Fisher of Oley, Berks County. The junior champion female was exhibited by Runnin Free Farm of Flemington, NJ, a senior heifer named "BCF Miss Mifflynn."

Sleepy Valley Farm from Lafayette, NJ, was named the premier exhibitor of the show. Their winter bull calf, "WMF Jack" captured reserve champion bull honors and their junior yearling bull, "HCR High Ace," was named the reserve junior champion bull.

Honors Split In Simmental Competition

Virginia and Pennsylvania exhibitors captured the major titles in Simmental open beef breeding competition.

Lisa Hoover from Mount Wolf, York County, captured the grand champion heifer banner with "Clary Miss Dude," an early junior yearling heifer and winner in the senior champion heifer class.

Sara Messick of Middletown, Dauphin County, took her late junior yearling bull to the winner's circle, as "MF Sam" was named the junior champion bull. The reserve junior champion bull, "Shoemakers Polled Flyer," was exhibited by Kenneth Foust of Gettysburg, Adams County.

Donald Virts of Purcellville, VA, was the big winner of the show, being honored with the title of premier exhibitor. He exhibited the grand champion bull, "MHF Mischief," the champion bull calf. Virts also had the reserve grand champion, a late junior yearling named "Miss HF," the champion bull calf and the champion heifer calf.

Teresa Eastep of Woodstock, VA, decided she wanted some of the day's glory and succeeded in being named the premier breeder of the Simmental show. She also took home ribbons for the reserve champion bull calf and the reserve champion heifer calf.

In only his second year of competition in Charolais at KILE, Myers also captured the award for premier breeder. The reserve champion female (left) was the bull's dam and was purchased several years ago from the Fiddler Green herd in Virginia.

Kent Fisher of Oley in Berks County exhibited the Charolais grand champion female, "HVF Consuela," for the breeding cattle competition at KILE. At the bridle is Kent's father, Steve Fisher.

The grand champion Simmental heifer "Clary Miss Dude" was exhibited by Lisa Hoover of Mt. Wolf, Lisa is the daughter of Ray and Donna Hoover.

Simmental Sire Summary Released

BOZEMAN MT. — The American Simmental Association has released its 17th annual sire evaluation report. The 1988 "National Simmental Sire Summary" contains information data on 2,423 Simmental and 37 Simbrah sires.

ASA has published a national Sire Summary each year since 1972. For the first time, however, ASA's Sire Summary was published as an integral part of the official breed publication, "The Register." "We are very pleased to have the '88 Sire Summary included in the October issue of our new magazine," said ASA Executive Vice-President Earl B. Peterson. "In that format, it will reach more than 12,000 addresses, including members, University Animal Science Departments, and others directly involved in the beef industry."

ASA's sire evaluation system was developed by the Animal Breeding Group at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York. Progeny records were evaluated for seven traits, including: First Calf Calving Ease, Birth Weight; Weaning Weight; Yearling Weight; and Maternal Milking. Included in the analyses are more than 865,000 weaning records and over 600,000 birth weights.

The number of Simbrah bulls analyzed increased from 23 in 1987 to 37 this year. "We are continuing to see growth in the Simbrah Registry," Peterson explained. "This relatively new breed, which combines the genetics of Simmental and Brahman cattle, is having an impact on the beef industry, and it is highly appropriate that it be included in the ASA sire evaluation program."

Additional information about ASA's 1988 Sire Summary is available from Association headquarters. Telephone 1-800-548-0205 or write the American Simmental Association, One Simmental Way, Bozeman, MT 59715.

KEEPING AMERICA ON THE GROW

Absentee Exhibitor Wins Market Hog Award

BY LOU ANN GOOD

MANHEIM — After a string of bad luck, Dave Cassel didn't expect to win any honors at the Manheim Community Farmshow on Monday.

First, five of the eight pigs he brought for competition were eliminated because they were overweight. Then, his steer got pushy while being unloaded and shoved his dad Marlin Cassel off the truck. Marlin was rushed to the hospital and diagnosed as having two broken ribs. That meant Dave had to go home to milk their cows and miss showing his three pigs during competion.

But two of Dave's friends offered to show Dave's red Durock hogs and for the first time in three years of competition, Dave captured the coveted Champion Market Hog trophy.

Lindy, the champion hog, weighed 226 pounds and had a thick, long-bodied built that excelled his competitors. Dave said after all the trouble, it sort of melted into the background when he heard of his success.

Nine-year-old Melissa Becker also celebrated success. She showed a Championship pair of crossbreds and placed first in novice showmanship.

Melissa said, "It's the best I ever did." The daughter of Marlin and Nancy Becker of R3 Manheim, she said her older sister Karen always did better. "Now, my sister thinks I'm doing better, but it doesn't really matter because we share the prize money anyway."

The Becker sisters raise about 45 pigs and make friends with some of them, but Melissa said, "We never know which ones we're going to show since it depends on their weight."

Larry Arnold, a Duroc hog breeder from Womelsdorf, judged the entrants. A listing of placings follows:

Dave Cassel's Durok outranked 108 entries at the Manheim Swine Show. It was named the top market hog.

International Harvester Owners

Tighten worn steering arms on 56-66-86 series IH tractors without welding, splitting, or bolting.

A taper is machined into the new steering arms. A sleeve is then broached to match the original splines of the spindle. The outside of the sleeve is tapered to match the inside taper of the arm. These two, finely-machined surfaces then meet for a neat, permanent, surelock fit. A key is installed for added strength and safety.

CHECK OUT THESE EXCLUSIVE UNI-LOADER FEATURES

CASE UNI-LOADER SKID STEERS ARE DESIGNED TO SAVE YOU TIME, LABOR AND MONEY

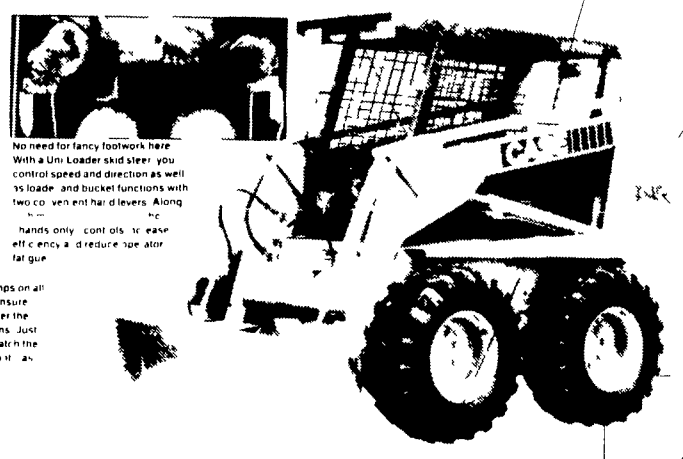
If you're like most farmers and ranchers, you buy a skid steer for three basic reasons. To save you time, labor and money. And those are the best reasons of all to buy a Case Uni-Loader.

From years designing equipment for agriculture and heavy construction, the engineers at Case IH know the difference between important features and costly "gadgets". So you can be sure that every feature you find on a Uni-Loader is designed to make your job and your life a lot easier.

Safety and convenience are standard features on a Uni-Loader. A unique safety system prevents activation of hydraulics whenever the operator leaves the machine with engine running by automatically shutting down the hydraulic system and locking the parking brake. All controls and monitors are located for maximum convenience. And the Roll Over Protection Structure (ROPS) gives you safety plus excellent visibility in all direct ons

The Model 1845C features self leveling loader arms that let you spot the load exactly where you want it. In addition to reducing the risk of spillage, this feature saves time and trouble.

Uni-Loader skid steers are as easy to service as they are to operate. The battery, filters and hydrostatic pumps are all within easy reach from ground level. Engine checks are made quickly through a swing open rear door. On the 1845C a de aeration reservoir in the cooling system eliminates the need to open the radiator when checking coolant level. Air filter clogging is indicated by a light on the instrument panel. And you can quickly check the hydraulic fluid level by an easy to read sight gauge.



No need for fancy footwork here. With a Uni-Loader skid steer you control speed and direction as well as loader and bucket functions with two convenient hand levers. Along with only two sprockets per chain external chain adjustment is made quickly and easily. Just move one sprocket toward or away from the other to obtain proper chain tension. This eliminates the need for a third idler sprocket, a major point of chain wear on other makes.

Big capacity hydraulic pumps on all three Uni-Loader models ensure quick response even under the toughest working conditions. Just flick the hand levers and watch the Uni-Loader do what you want, as you want.

Uni-Loader skid steers come with your choice of buckets ranging from 75 to 80 inches in width. Each bucket is crafted from heavy duty galvanized steel for years of dependable service.

Uni-Loader skid steers feature two separate oil systems - one for the hydraulics with a reservoir in the uprights and another for the chains and sprockets with two reservoirs in the main frame. This eliminates contamination of hydraulic oil by grit from the chains and sprockets. And the 1845C's single oil (loader 10W-30 oil is used in the engine, hydraulics, hydrostatics and chain compartments to save time, money and confusion.

The optional ROPS kit for the 1845C provides quick, daily service of engine and power train components. It only takes 15 minutes for one person to handle this simple procedure.

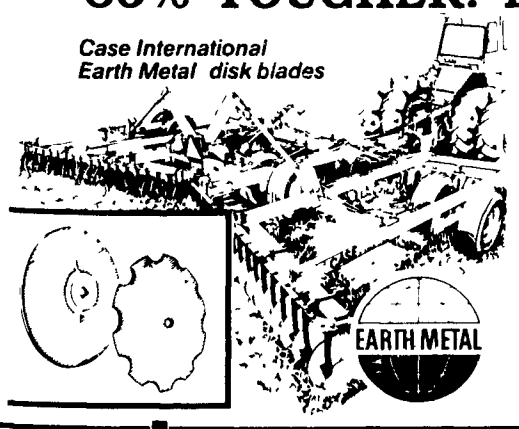
Case International Earth Metal disk blades



Super hard and super tough! Exclusive Earth Metal disk blades made from a special steel formula are much tougher and last much longer than conventional blades.

How can this be? Because the uniform internal structure of the steel is virtually non directional it's equally tough in all directions. It also takes a greater degree of hardening so blades stay sharp longer rarely split or shatter. And the unique crimped center design of the blades makes them stronger still and reduces the amount of power needed to pull the harrow as well.

Don't settle for ordinary blades that require frequent replacement. See us for genuine Case International Earth Metal blades.

Don't forget to see our Parts Dept... We have Earth Metal Blades for replacing or rebuilding any brand of disk harrow you may have.

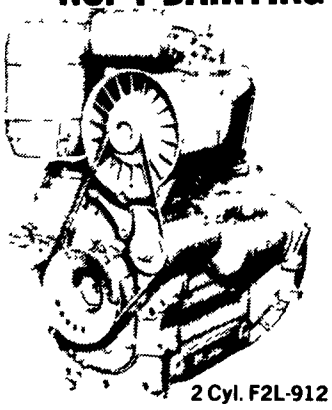
NO. 1 DAIRYING DIESEL



2 Cyl. F2L-912

KHD DEUTZ

Since 1968 F2L-912 diesels have earned the reputation as the most reliable diesel. Don't settle for less.

EASIER STARTING: Heavy flywheel provides easy starting. No electric heater plugs.

QUIETER: Runs quieter than most water cooled diesels. Very quiet exhaust.

Continuous Duty Rating:
26.5 HP @ 1800 RPM

Fewer repair parts than comparable three-cylinder diesels - cheaper to overhaul.

It has direct injection, lube oil cooling, and oil cooled pistons. This engine has proven to survive the extreme heat of a heavy load in a small engine house better than any other engine.

IS THERE A BETTER CORN & BEAN COMBINE THAN THE CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW?

Hoober's Combine Owners Think Not!

LISTEN TO WHAT HOOBER'S AXIAL-FLOW OWNERS SAY ABOUT THEIR COMBINES:

We Asked Our Customers, "Did the purchase of the CASE IH Axial-Flow Combine increase your combine productivity?"

Amount of fines are less. Our harvest time was cut down by one third.

JOE DiMARTINO
Walden, NY

More harvest capacity so we have less stops to unload. Easier to make threshing adjustments. Much faster and easier to change from corn to soybeans.

HOWARD MYERS
Lawrenceville, NJ

One axial-flow can do the work of two JD's with less grain loss and damage using half the fuel.

WILLIAM RINAS
Felton, PA

The rotary is untouchable in capacity and is maintenance free.

DARYL ALGER
Palmyra, PA

I can do more acres per day. I also was able to take on extra custom work.

DAVID MAST
Elverson, PA

With the rotor I can travel a bit faster on hills and I have less cracked grain in the sample.

DAVID BECKER
Elizabethtown, PA

We put less grain out the back and also put cleaner grain in the tank

CHARLES & CARL BOMGARDNER
Annville, PA

We are able to cover a lot more acres and able to handle bad conditions better.

KENNETH SMITH
Middleburg, PA

Much, much less downtime

DICKEY-john DjGMT Grain Moisture Tester

The DICKEY-john Grain Moisture Tester measures moisture content automatically. You don't have to preweigh the sample. There are no meters to read, no dials to set, and no thermometer to lose. As soon as you pour in the grain sample, the testing sequence begins. A digital readout is displayed when the proper weight of the sample has entered the test chamber. The readout is corrected for temperature at the touch of a pressure sensitive switch. Models are available with direct readouts for corn, soybeans or wheat, and adhesive conversion charts are provided for other grains.

Simple, four-step operation

1 Place the tester on a steady, level surface. Then lift the protective cover up and slide it down out of the way.

2 Use the sample cup to pour grain into the testing cell. Pour slowly and steadily, taking about eight to ten seconds to empty the sample cup. A readout will appear automatically.

3 Wait at least fifteen seconds. Then press the temperature compensation switch for a direct readout of the moisture content of the grain listed on that switch. Refer to the appropriate chart for other grains.

4 Empty the tester by turning it over. (If you should forget to empty the test cell, the tester will shut itself off automatically after two minutes.)

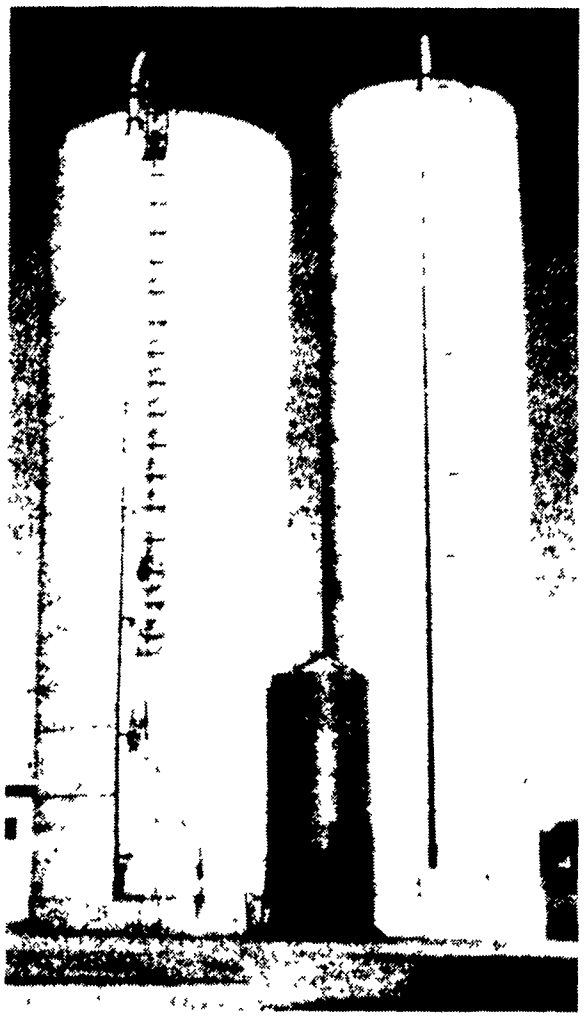
Solid Ways To Improve Your Farm

Consider The Many Advantages Of Concrete



You still have time to get your Sollenberger Silo for high moisture corn storage this fall. The summer of 1987 will be remembered for the many hot, dry days. These high temperatures damaged a lot of stored corn in structures that have a thin wall and do not reflect heat. Avoid this heat damage with a poured concrete silo from Sollenberger Silos Corp.

* The Laidig 43 bottom unloader handles high moisture ear corn and shelled corn.

* The Laidig 98 or 198 will do a good job with grains; or forage at 55-60% moisture. BY FILLING EARLIER YOU CAN SAVE YOUR VALUABLE LEAVES.

✔ Smooth 6'' Poured Concrete Walls
✔ Sure-Seal Filling System Opens And Closes From The Ground
✔ Safety Rail Around The Poured Concrete Roof
✔ Enclosed Gooseneck
✔ Many Other Features
✔ Flying Dutchman Unloader Available

31st Annual KILE Breeds Sheep Winners

BY LISA HAMM

HARRISBURG—Breeders went home Monday night from the 31st Keystone International Livestock Exposition counting their winnings as well as their sheep. Competition was stiff as participants from 13 states showed the cream of their flock in 250 classes. Montadale sheep were presented for the first time at KILE this year, with 12 exhibitors showing 56 beautifully fitted, stylish sheep.

Cheviot

Erdenheim Farm, Lafayette Hill, Pa., swept the Cheviot division, placing first in each division. Owner F. Eugene Dixon, who has been breeding Cheviots for 50 years, also won the premier exhibitor award.

Circle K Cheviot, Bedford, Pa., did well taking second in the spring ram lamb class, pair of ram lambs class, pair of yearling ewes class, and exhibitor's flock classes well as having the reserve champion ram and third place in the pen of three ewe lambs class.

Shepherd Marlyn Stroh and his wife, Alice, showed the champion Cheviot ram and ewe at the KILE show. The farm, owned by F. Eugene Dixon of Lafayette Hills, Pa., has been breeding Cheviots for 50 years.

This spring Hampshire ram, exhibited by Verna Gengler, Honey Hill Hampshires, Pittstown, N.J., and handler Buster Wilson, was judged champion of its breed. Its full brother was the reserve champion.

Rebecca Hope's history of showing champions continued as she exhibited the top Hampshire ewe. Her mother, Betty, handled the Knoxville, Md. girl's spring lamb.

Columbia

Bob and Suzie Leib of Shepherd's Crook Farm in Mechanicsburg showed the two top rams at the show; a fall lamb, undefeated this year, took the champion honors and a yearling ram was judged the reserve champion. The two sheep also placed first in the pair of ram lambs class. Other Leib entries were runners-up in the pen of three ewe lambs and pair of yearling ewes classes. The Leibs also walked away with second in the exhibitor's flock class.

The champion ewe was exhibited by Richard & Mary Ann Johnson, who had the champion ram last year and champion ram and ewe in 1985. The Johnsons also took first in the pen of three ewe lambs, spring ewe lamb, and exhibitor's flock, and second in spring ewe lamb and yearling ram.

Corriedale

Dennis Kendall, Jr.,. from Hydes, Md., just got into Corriedales last spring and is might glad he did: the fall ram lamb he showed was judged champion. Pennsylvanian Emil Mellott from Needmore did well with second in the pair of ram lambs and pen of three ewe lambs as did Kimberly A. Hopple from Mechanicsburg who took first in the yearling ram class and third in the pair of yearling ewes and exhibitor's flock classes.

Dorset

Despite stiff competition, M.M. Downsbrough of Windswept Farm in State College took the champion ram and reserve champion ewe honors as well as the premiere exhibitor's award. Windswept also placed first and second in the yearling ewe class, first in pen of three ewe lambs, second in fall ewe lamb and first in spring ewe lamb.

Pennsylvania breeder, Alicia Strausbaugh of York showed the champion ewe as well as placing second in the spring and fall ram classes, first in the pair of ram lambs, first in the fall ewe lamb class, and second in the pen of three ewe lambs.

The reserve champion Dorset ram lamb was the first place fall buck shown by Herr Family Dorsets in Narvon.

Hampshire

Honey Hill Farm of Pittstown, N.J., showed two full sibling rams, a spring lamb and a yearling, which were judged champion and reserve champion ram respectively. The farm, owned by Verna Gengler, also was named second in the exhibitor's flock class.

The champion ewe was a spring lamb shown by Rebecca Hope of Knoxville, Md., while Price Stock Farm of Westminister, Md., claimed the reserve champion ewe honors. Hope had the top exhibitor's flock and won the premier exhibitor award.

Montadale

The first KILE champion Montadale ram and ewe were shown by Alfred and Katherine Tyler of Glen Arm, Md. The champion ram, a long-bodied, stretchy kind of lamb won its spring class, while the ewe took her yearling class. The Tylers also placed first in the spring ewe and pen of three ewe lambs and their spring ewe was named reserve champion.

Rambouillet

Yetter's liquid fertilizer coulter works in no-till, mini-till, and conventional operations.

Yetter Liquid Fertilizer Coulters Designed For Versatility

Yetter liquid Fertilizer Coulters are designed for applying fertilizer in no-till, mini-till or conventional operations. They work especially well in trash-filled fields because the 17" ripple bladed coulter slices trash to clear a path for the close-following injection knife. Corrosion resistant stainless steel tubing formed at the end into a flat rectangle, 1/4" in width, is shaped to match coulter width and cut a clean, narrow slot. The soil is left virtually intact to prevent wind and water erosion, while placing the fertilizer anywhere from 2½ " to 5" in depth alongside and below the root zone where it can be taken up by growing seedlings with maximum efficiency.

Heavy duty 1½ " spindles are equipped with sealed tapered roller bearings for long, durable service, and all parts are fully greasable. Spring deflection is 5.5" and adjustable for downpressures up to 900 pounds. The narrow alloy steel knives are exceptionally resistant to abrasion and can be adjusted for wear.

These units come with a versatile bracket for mounting on JD, Kinze, IH, Case IH, White, New Idea and Allis-Chalmers pull type and 3-point hitch planters, grain drills and row crop cultivators.

Upjohn Publishes Scours-Management Reports

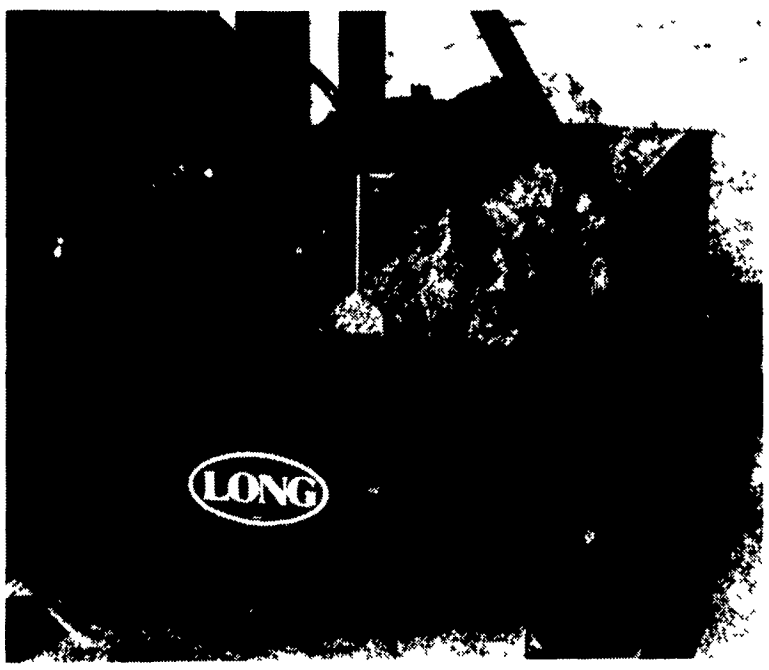
KALAMAZOO, MICH. — An effective medication program along with sound management practices can combat costly scours problems in dairy, beef and swine, according to a series of scours management reports recently published by The Upjohn Company.

As detailed in the series, the most common scours-causing organisms are E. coli and Salmonella species. And, one of the most effective antibiotics for treating scours caused by these organisms is neomycin.

The three reports, each targeting a different livestock species, discuss the causes of scours and an effective treatment program incorporating Biosol.

For a copy of these reports on treating scours effectively and conveniently, write: Dairy Scours Management 1, Beef Scours Management 1 or Swine Scours Management 1, The Upjohn Company, P.O. Box 5087, Kalamazoo, MI 49001-5087. Please indicate which report(s) you would like.

Long Box Blade



The Long Box Blade with the hydraulic bucket not only scrapes, grades, and levels, but transports soil as well. Its hydraulic bucket, when rotated to the closed position, extends underneath the collected dirt so that it can be lifted with the Box Blade for transporting to another location and dumped. Also, the bucket can be rotated open with the Blade slightly raised to distribute the collected soil evenly and level the earth as it passes over low spots in the ground surface.

Case IH Skid-Steer Loaders Mechanize Farm Chores

RACINE, Wisc. — Maneuverability, dependability, and versatility are designed into three new skid-steer loaders that round out the Uni-Loader® series from Case IH. The Models 1818, 1825 and 1835C Uni-Loader skid-steer loaders join the Model 1845C in continuing the Case IH tradition of proven skid-steer loader performance and industry-leading innovation and technology.

The Model 1825 represents the first entry by Case IH in the 701- to 975-pound (315 to 439 kg) lift capacity class. The 1825 offers a new combination of size and capacity that fits many agricultural applications. It is the same height as the extremely manueverable 1818 and only 9 inches wider.

The four Case IH skid-steer loaders offer combinations of manueverability and capacity to fit a wide range of livestock operations, feed handling and all-around loading and hauling.

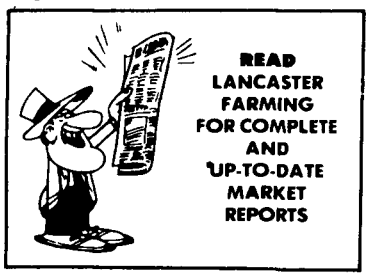
Case IH skid-steer loaders are designed for: excellent handling in tight spaces; reliable performance; easy, low-cost operation; and ease of servicing.

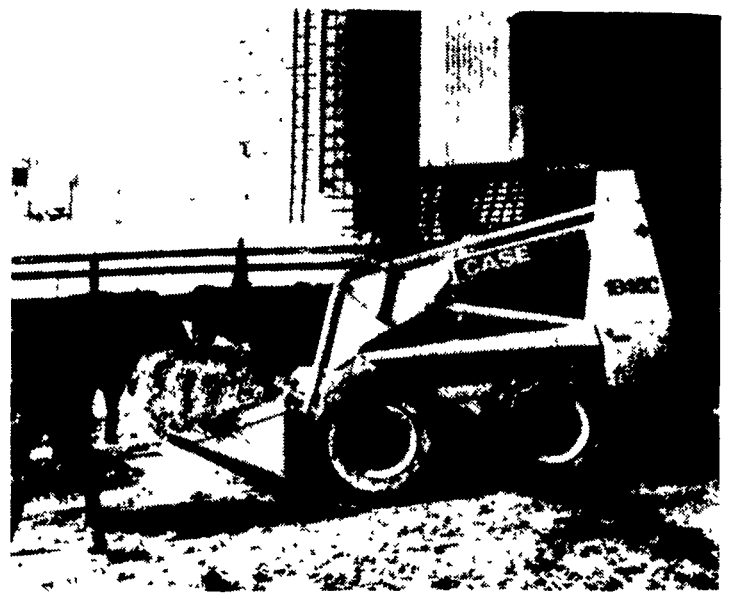
Case IH Uni-Loader skid-steer loaders have numerous common design elements. For example, each unit incorporates an operator restraint and standard parking latch for added safety.

Case IH skid-steer loaders also feature movable ROPS and modular construction for outstanding access to the engine and drive train. This ease of serviceability, coupled with proven components and simple design, reduces costly downtime. The Model 1835C features the same roll-forward ROPS design found on the larger Model 1845C. Models 1825 and 1818 feature a flip-up ROPS.

The controls on all Case IH Uni-Loader skid-steer loaders are designed with human factors in mind to reduce operator fatigue and improve productivity. All units -- except the Model 1818 -- feature an advanced electronic instrument panel.

All four Case IH Uni-Loader skid steer loaders are available with a wide range of bucket sizes and attachments, including buckets for snow and light materials, manure forks, a snowblower, grapple forks, four-in-one bucket and pallet forks.





The Case IH Model 1845C Uni-Loader® is powered by a choice of gas or diesel engines rated at 51 SAE net horsepower (38 KW). It has a self-leveling loader with a lift capacity of 1,700 pounds (765 kg), and is 6 feet, 8 inches (2.03 m) high and 62.5 inches (1.59 m) wide.

Northrup King Offers New Agronomic Hotline For Farmers

Farmers anywhere in the country can call a new toll-free number to find answers to their local agronomic questions. The telephone number is 1-800-AGVISOR. This agronomic hotline is being offered to all farmers by The New Northrup King.

"Callers will be able to talk with an agronomist who is experienced with the crops, soils, weather patterns and management options in their particular geography," says David Thomas, Executive Director of Marketing for The New Northrup King. "Naturally, a farmer from North Carolina who raises soybeans, peanuts and tobacco will not want to ask cropping questions of an agronomist who works in Nebraska or Iowa. Likewise, the farmer in Iowa will want to talk with an agronomist who is experienced in corn and soybean production in the Midwest, while the Nebraska farmer will want the agronomist to also know about sorghum production and irrigation."

Each call to the 1-800-AGVISOR network will automatically be routed to The New Northrup King agronomist who works in the caller's geography. This will be done through an AT&T computer that deciphers where a call originates and then routes it instantaneously to the appropriate agronomist. The New Northrup King agronomist will answer the call unless on a field call, in which case, an answering machine will record the caller's name and phone number. The New Northrup King agronomists call their offices for messages several times each day when they are on the road.

"We want to offer a real service," contends Thomas. That is why the company has charged its agronomists with the responsibility of responding to farmers' calls within 24 hours. "We expect more calls in the fall and spring when farmers are in the fields. During these busy seasons, it's critical that we respond with the needed information in a very timely manner," he explains.

Thomas notes the breadth of experience represented in the AGVISOR network. "In an average year, each of the agronomists in the AGVISOR network talks to more than 2,500 farmers, has one-on-one discussions with more than 500 farmers and evaluates crop performance in more than 200 fields," says Thomas. In addition to this, The New Northrup King agronomists are in frequent contact with University and company researchers. While farmers themselves have the greatest experience on their own farms, it would be difficult for any one farmer to have the time to gather and assimilate all the information that an agronomist can in a year. "Our agronomists' full-time job is to keep abreast of agronomic trends and practices. With the AGVISOR network, we hope to increase the number of farmers who can take advantage of their expertise," says Thomas.

"If our AGVISOR agronomists do not immediately know the answer to an agronomic question, they will find the answer," says Thomas. Each agronomist is backed by company researchers at more than 15 U.S. research stations. The New Northrup King was formed by the merger of Northrup King, Pride and Stauffer Seeds.

Ag Society Recognizes Case IH

ST. JOSEPH, MI-- The case IH of Racine has been recognized for contributing to outstanding innovation in product or systems technology during 1986-87. The company's grain drill and electronic monitor was named to the "The Agricultural Engineering 50" and featured within the September/ October issue of Agricultural Engineering.

Virtually all companies making products for food and agriculture are eligible to submit nominations for the honor. Winning products and systems are recognized as "developments that embody the application of new technology or the innovative application of an older technology."

A distinguished panel of engineering experts reviewed hundreds of "product nominations". The panel selected those considered most likely to make "worthwhile contributions to the advancement of engineering in agriculture".

The products and systems selected for "The AE 50" play an important part as significant developments in the production, processing, research, storage, packaging and transportation of agricultural and food products. They contribute to more cost effective production, added product value and improved quality for consumers.

"The AE 50" innovative developments are chosen by Agricultural Engineering, the magazine which reports on engineering trends, technologies and applications in food and agriculture. The magazine is published by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE).

ASAE is a professional and technical organization of members--worldwide--interested in engineering knowledge and technology for agriculture, associated industries, and related resources. Headquartered in St. Joseph, Michigan, USA, the Society's membership includes 12,000 members in 110 countries.

Swine Management

BY RICHARD BARCZEWSKI
Ext. Co. Agricultural Agent
University of Delaware

The Choice Is Yours

What quality of hog do you produce on your farm? If you're like most producers, you think you're going in the right direction, but you really don't know. The reason for this is that you get no direct feedback from the consumers who buy the product. This feedback goes to the packer, who alters the processing, trimming and buying patterns to conform to consumer wishes.

I've been on this bandwagon for a long time and have not seen very much in the way of a solution to the problem. The only way consistently will ever come to the industry's pork products is through discounts for poor quality hogs.

It's amazing how much variability exists in the hogs we sell. Recently I had the opportunity to visit a local sale barn and observe the animals. Large variations exist in type, weight and leanness even within a given load of hogs. We as an industry cannot afford to tolerate such inconsistencies, which ultimately lead to market losses.

For this reason I'm going to ask you to think about two key items. Hog buyers purchase hogs with two things in mind.

First and foremost, is this particular animal the type that the packing plant they represent is looking for? If it is, then you can expect to receive top dollar. If not, you will be discounted.

Secondly, has the hog in question reached the desired weight and degree of finish? Again, if it has, you will probably receive top dollar; if not, you will be discounted.

I hope these two questions have set off a buzzer in your head. If you're not getting top dollar for your hogs, there must be a reason. Either they're not the right weight or they're not the right type.

If you're selling your hogs at local auction markets, top dollar may be higher or lower than at a buying station, depending on the demand for hogs at the sale on that day. But rest assured, the best hogs will still bring the best prices.

It doesn't matter whether you're selling feeder pigs, market hogs or cull sows, the better the animal the better the price at a particular market on a particular day.

So what can you do if you're not topping the market? The best thing is to talk to the buyer at the buying station and listen to what he's got to say. Sometimes we have to swallow our pride to make improvements. I know that I never got a large thrill out of having a couple of faults thrown in my face, but if you don't know what's wrong with your hogs, how can you make any improvements?

I'm convinced that it's up to the producer to make sure he's doing the best possible job of raising the type of hog the market is demanding. Relying on somebody else to make those decisions will only result in disappointment and frustration.

Keep an open mind about hog types. No other livestock industry

Lebanon Conservation Dist. Supports Bond

LEBANON — The Lebanon County Conservation District Board of Directors announced its support for the upcoming statewide referendum on a $100 million farmland preservation bond issue at their monthly board meeting on Thursday, October 1, 1987. Voters will be deciding the referendum's fate at the November 3rd General Election.

"For more than 20 years, farmers and other interested individuals, including the Lebanon County Conservation District, have supported legislative efforts to ask seek legislation which would preserve prime farmland. Now the opportunity is here... not just for farmers, but for all citizens of Pennsylvania to join in an effort to save farmland," said Charles Wertz, Acting District Manager of the Lebanon County Conservation District.

Governor P. Casey signed the legislation in July authorizing the referendum to be voted on at the November General Election.

Lebanon County had more than 123,000 acres under cultivation in 1983. That same year agriculture provided more than $98 million cash to the economy of our County.

is more dynamic than the pork industry. Right or wrong, it has made mnay changes over the years to accommodate the packer and the consumer. Sometimes these changes have been a good move, while at other times the trends have been in the wrong direction, leading to many other problems on the farm. Such was the case when the industry was headed toward heavily muscled, stress-prone animals. Fortunately we survived that problem.

We need to make a move now to produce the lean hog desired by packers and consumers alike. If you are already doing the job and topping the market on a consistent basis, by all means continue doing what you normally do. But if you're not getting top price, find out where you can improve and adjust your operation to get into that top marketing bracket.

In most instances, we control our own destiny. If we produce inferior animals that are overconditioned and light-muscled, the discounted price we receive is exactly what we deserve. However, if we're producing superior hogs that command top prices, we will be in a stronger position financially and more likely to remain a viable part of the swine industry.

Hidden Messages

Most dairymen appreciate their DHIA records for the milk production and fat test data they provide. In addition to this obvious information, your records may also contain some hidden messages of value to you.

Are your cows peaking as high as they should? If not, this could be a reflection of a variety of problems: appetites, availability and quality of feed and water, inadequate bunk space, stray voltage, inadequate dry cow program and poor flesh, imbalanced rations, inadequate growthiness of heifers at time of calving, illnesses and infections, heat stress, lack of fresh air, etc. The list is almost endless.

Do the cows hold their peaks well. Generally speaking, the rate of decline in production from one month to the next should be less than about 10%. The rate of decline for heifers usually is less than it is for older cattle.

The same problems that prevent cows from peaking as high as they should may also be responsible for their rapid decline. Cows that are poor in flesh will have a very difficult time sustaining high levels of production.

Don't be surprised if these thin cows fail to show good heats and fail to conceive. They may have normal cycles but they simply have too poor an energy balance to support pregnancy.

These same thin cows also will probably be very low in fat test. In fact, in some cases you might even find protein tests exceeding fat tests. Once these cows regain some of the flesh they lost, chances are, their fat tests and reproductive performance will improve.

So, if production curves drop off sharply, if fat tests plummet, and if cows fail to conceive, observe the condition (fleshing) of the cows and evaluate your dry cow and feeding programs.

Low fat tests may also be a reflection of inadequate forage and fiber intake and poor rumen health. How much time do cows spend chewing their cud? That can be a clue.

How do the lactation curves (levels and persistency) of second lactation heifers compare with those of first lactation heifers? Heifers should produce considerably better as they mature. If they are sluggish in their second lactation, could it be they were too small and out of condition at first calving? Perhaps this also resulted in undue stress as a result of difficult calving. If they were too small was it because they calved too young or because they simply were not managed well enough to be growthy and of sufficient size to calve at about 24 months of age?

If a heifer is too small and out of condition in her first lactation, chances are, she can't consume enough energy for growth in addition to that needed for production and reproduction. That being the case, she'll probably be thin when dried off and will not be in condition to start a second lactation in productive fashion.

Let's turn now to the somatic cell counts. Do heifers freshen with low counts? If not, they may have been sucked as heifers and freshened with mastitis. Or high cell counts at calving time and flare-ups soon afterwards may be the result of poor sanitation in the maternity area. Perhaps the cow went dry with an infection, and the dry treatment was ineffective.

Do cell counts on cows and heifers start increasing soon after calving? This could be an indication that infection is being spread from cow to cow at milking time.

How do cell counts of older cows compare with those of first and second lactation heifers? The counts on heifers should be low. If not, you're not controlling the spread of infection in the herd. If the cell counts of older cows are quite high, it may be that cows are being predisposesd to infection (i.e., inadequate milking systems poor milkikng technique, inadequate stalls, etc.), and the infection is not being eradicated. perhaps these cows don't respond to treatment and should be culled so they don't become seeds of infection for other cattle.

What is the seasonal trend of cell counts for the herd? If counts for all cows start increasing it could point to such things as changes in milking practices, milking equipment (faulty regulators, pumps and pulsators, old inflations, etc.), voltage levels, environmental conditions (heat, slop, etc.).

These are a few examples of hidden messages that are hidden in your DHIA data.

Look into the newest shape in performance-engineered efficiency.

INTRODUCING THE NEW B SERIES SPREADERS FROM HEDLUND/MARTIN

Hedlund/Martin is well-known for innovative manure spreader design. And these new B Series box spreaders are no exception. They're tough, dependable performers with advanced features built right in.

Like the Clad-Tuff® flooring with a super-slick surface, so loads glide out smoothly without undue stress on drives and apron chains. Roller-chain drive for positive action—with double shear bolt protection. Straight line frame for maximum strength. And beater blades bolted in a "rooster comb" pattern to deliver consistent and thorough shredding. There's even a full 10-year warranty on the copper-bearing steel sides.

So if you're in the market for a new spreader, look into the newest shape in performance-engineered efficiency. Look into the new B Series spreaders from Hedlund/Martin.

Inexpensive B Series spreaders are available in six different models. One just right for your farming operation. See them on display at your local Hedlund/Martin dealer. Or for more information write: Hedlund/Martin, Inc., a Gehl Company, 841 Kutztown Road, Myerstown, PA 17067. Telephone: 717-933-4151.

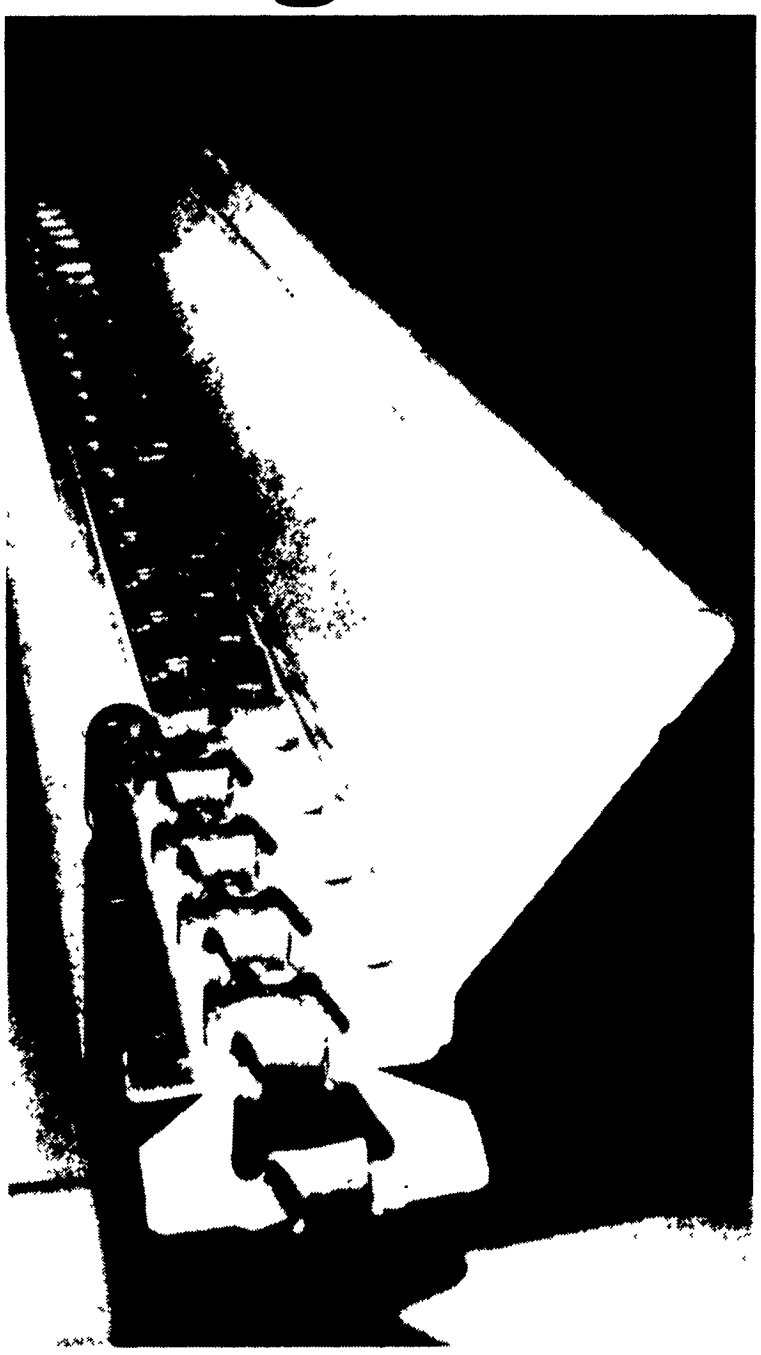
A Cage isn't enough



It takes more than wire to make a cage system More than anything else it takes a feeder.

Sure, other components are important, but mainly it's the feeder that makes the system. That's why Big Dutchman's Systems are equipped with a SPEED FEED chain feeder that feeds every bird the right amount at the right time, without waste

When you compare poultry equipment remember that the real test of a cage system is its feeder Big Dutchman is ready for the test.

Big Dutchman, where proven ideas are put into action.

The above herd is sired by A.I. sires from Sire Power and ABS for generations. The cows and bred heifers are exceptionally large individuals with the milking animals very pleasing in mammary. This is a fall freshening herd with production and type that will satisfy you, (well worth the drive). One of the outstanding herds to be sold in this area
